Capitol and Monuments
Chief Justice Hughes
The President Himself

This is about Washington, some things and people there. Leaving the Union Railroad station in the evening you see first the Capitol's dome bathed in artificial white light. It looks solid and comforting. Address it, saying: "You have seen the beginning and end of many other depressions, and you will see the end of this one."

How many brains have worked under that white dome in the process of building the United States to its present height?

How many others, greater because they will have greater knowledge, will work there through centuries to come, building the name and glory of this country still higher?

You drive by gigantic new buildings that you did not know, a new Department of Justice, very massive. Would that our control of crime were as substantial. A Department of Commerce twice as big as any building we ever built before. If only we had enough commerce to fill it.

You come to an old friend, the straight monument built for George Washington, and find it surrounded, from bottom to top, with a strange scaffolding of steel. In these days of pouring out money for buildings and other things it has been decided to give Washington's monument a bath.

The men that work on it seem like the Lilliputians, swarming over Gulliver. You can hardly believe that the monument is already old enough to need scraping and dressing up, especially if you remember, as this individual does, when the monument was starting, and General Grant, short and portly, with his usual cigar, used to walk down from the White House, across the muddy Potomac flats, to watch the monument's progress and look at big stone blocks lying about, sent from many states.

Only a little before that, when the President of the United States felt that he must have a bath he walked still farther over the flats, and took his bath in the Potomac river, drying himself as he stood on the bank. There was an outcry, "effeminate, extravagant, un-American," when it was first suggested that a bathtub be installed in the White House, with hot and cold water and soap. The project was abandoned in the name of patriotism, and "simple, rugged Americanism."

But there are baths in the White House now, and a patriotic, simple and VERY RUGGED President living there.

A few hours in Washington (this was Saturday) make it possible to see many that are important; for instance, Mr. Chief Justice Hughes. He looks exactly as he did 30 years ago, except that his beard has changed from dark brown to white. His eyes have not changed, he stands straight as a white pine. It is better to have your beard turn white than to have your eyes turn dull. That has not happened to the chief justice. His position calls for knowledge and courage—knowledge of law and history, courage to ignore the applause or protests of the crowd.

And Mr. Garner, vice-president, his face the color of a ripe chestnut when the shell first opens, after his vacation of shooting and fishing in Texas. You feel power in that man at a considerable distance, and his cheerful expression tells you that he sees the good side of not having NRA and all the other

LABOR FLAYS ELY'S USE OF TROOPERS

Charging "misuse of executive authority," Robert J. Watt, legislative agent of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, protested today to Governor Ely against use of state troopers as "strike-breakers" in Dudley, Southbridge, Ludlow and other communities.

In his open letter, Watt demanded of the governor that he call off "the strike-breaking troopers."

"When a prominent citizen in a fashionable community," said Watt, "has to telephone to Washington for ordinary police protection to save his daughter from kidnapers, we believe that anyone who diverts normal police functions to assist mill owners in strike breaking is guilty of misuse of his executive authority and neglect of sworn duty."

The Watt letter read:

"We protest against the diversion of public funds to subsidize private business in the violation

BOSTON TIP SPURS WAR ON DOPE

Revelation that correspondence, seized in Boston some time ago in a narcotic raid, furnished powerful ammunition in the nation-wide raiding on Saturday, came today at the federal building.

The correspondence, narcotic and paraphernalia were confiscated during a raid in Copps Hill terrace, where Joseph Magnotta and Perigi Tortorva were arrested on a charge of violation of the Harrison Narcotic Act. They are held in $10,000 each for a hearing Dec. 13 in federal court.

Charles A. Burrows, supervisor of the New England narcotic division, and Special Officer Daniel F. Curran of the Boston police narcotic squad, led the raid.

As the result of information they gleaned, federal agents throughout the country received tips which were invaluable in Saturday's concerted sorties against narcotic sellers and addicts, in which more than 700 men and women were arrested.

The correspondence seized dealt with narcotic shipments both from

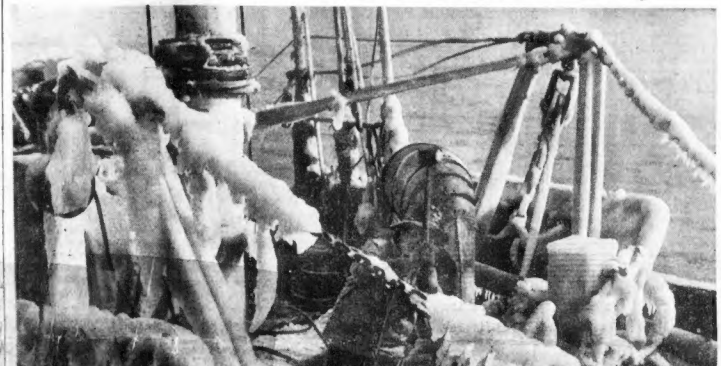
Fish—and Fishermen, Too—Come Iced Today



Old Man Winter, it appears, has just been a-stompin' and a-ragin' up around the Newfoundland banks, these last few days. Off George's, it was snowing, too. This is one of 21 fishing vessels, back at Boston—with free ice for their cargo and plenty to spare. Since the December sunshine is still pretty pale, crews have to chop their decks free of Jack Frost's festoons. Atlantic avenue will look good tonight. This is Albert Wentzel of the Schooner Rainbow. YULE BENEFIT SEEN IN JOBS, SAVINGS RETURN

Good cheer in the Christmas spirit was visited today upon Boston and Bostonians, when cash loomed up for some and jobs for others.

The jobs will come through repairing of the Army Base in South Boston, for which the Public Works Administration allotted today $896,000 of the $960,000 asked for by Mayor Mansfield, who was in Washington on Saturday to plead for the grant.

JOBS FOR HUNDREDS

Cash will come to 4900 depositors of the Charlestown Trust Company when disbursement of about $690,000 in the savings department will begin o nDecember 22, according to a announcement by Leo M. Harlow, liquidating agent.

For weeks Mayor Mansfield has been seeking a PWA allotment for repairing the Army Base, whose piling has been greatly damaged and weakened by a species of marine worm.

In seeking the grant, the mayor made two trips to Washington, a number of telephone calls and in addition, sent telegrams.

He estimates that several hundred men will be given work for a long period as soon as repairing of the huge Army Base starts.

PIER IN DANGER

Representative McCormack has been urging the PWA to speed approval of the project, calling attention to a report by the army district engineer in Boston, which indicated the piling under the wharf and building at the Army Base was in a highly unsatisfactory condition.

McCormack told the administration the pier actually was in grave danger of collapse unless repairs were made immediately.

An allotment of $16,000 was made for remodeling work at Watertown Arsenal, Watertown, Mass.

The work consists of converting the south storehouse at the Arsenal into five sets of officers' quarters.

The public works administration also announced the following reductions in allotments: Lexington, Mass., grant of $11,000 for installing water mains and erecting an elevated storage tank reduced to $7360 because the town deferred laying the mains.

Boston, Mass., grant of $564,400 for construction of the West Roxbury high school and the South Boston intermediate school reduced to $552,000 because of revision of plans.

The new plans call for a smaller building for the high school and application of part of the money for construction of a two-story addition to the Robert Gould Shaw school in West Roxbury.

BET SPREE DRAINS WORKER'S PURSE

14 Million Weekly Loss

RACKETEERS TAKE THOUSANDS IN BOSTON DAILY

Bootleggers—whose prohibition alcohol racket cost America many lives and many millions of dollars—have stepped into a new gyp racket that is taking almost 800 million dollars a year from the pockets of working Americans. The spread of gambling and the aspect of "protection" of illicit gambling games today presents one of the greatest problems in the war on crime.

This is the first of a series of exclusive articles exposing the petty gambling rackets now in existence and indicating their drain on the working class pocketbook.

By LOU WEDEMER

New York, Dec. 10—The working class of the United States has embarked on a new gambling "spree," risking hundreds of thousands of dollars weekly on games of chance in which the odds are at least 100 to 1 against them!

A survey by Universal Service disclosed today that the fever has seized New England in its grip. And the fever is spreading from coast to coast, from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico.

Racketeers in American cities are sharing the increasing "take" with foreign lotteries.

The racketeers, driven out of easy money by repeal, and unwilling to work, are reaping a harvest, and well they may—for the working class as well as the wealthy are spending their money on odds that range from 1 in 100 to 1 in a million.

A conservative estimate, based on the best figures available, puts the

CRIPPLED BOAT UNDER ESCORT

New York, Dec. 10—The crippled Japanese freighter Victoria Maru, bound for Boston, stricken helpless in a mid-Atlantic storm, is proceeding on to the English Channel, under escort of the Dutch steamer Amsterdam, it was reported here this afternoon.

The radio marine office of Western Union received the following message from its Chatham (Mass.) station at 12:28 p. m.:

"Steamship Victoria Maru now proceeding English Channel, under escort S. S. Amsterdam."

The message failed to reveal the fate of the crew aboard. The ship's captain and two officers were killed, a third officer injured and seven of the crew injured, earlier messages revealed.

S O S messages, intercepted by other ships that went racing to her rescue, told of her bridge being destroyed by mountainous waves.

The Victoria Maru was scheduled to dock here next Saturday with consignments for John G. Hall & Co., 84 State street.

After taking on a general cargo at Hamburg she docked at Ymuiden, Holland, and sailed from there November 27.

New Landslide Crushes Man Held by Rock

By Associated Press

Greystones, Ireland, Dec. 10—With rescue workers only one foot away, a new slide of earth swept down over the head of Charles O'Leary today and probably killed the man who had been buried alive in a well more than 42 hours.

By International News Service

Greystones, Ireland, Dec. 10—"Father! I am dying."

This anguished cry from beneath a rock slide in the Wicklow mountains this afternoon caused rescue workers to lower a priest to the spot where Charles O'Leary was trapped and administer the last sacraments.

O'Leary was caught in a rock-slide in a deep well. Rescuers hewed frantically at the rocks over the week-end and reached within a foot of him when new falls of sand necessitated temporary abandonment of their efforts.

The entire country waited to hear the result of the heroic rescue attempts and praised O'Leary's stoic courage. He failed in an attempt to amputate his own leg without an anaesthetic.

Surgeons passed lamps and instruments down to him, and shouted instructions as to how he could go about cutting off his own leg.

The prisoner, however, succeeded only in partially severing the limb, when the pain proved unbearable.

When surgeons got almost near enough to start operating on both legs themselves, O'Leary refused to let them cut. "Get me out as I am, or let me die," he cried.

Jack Lait Tells of First Crime Probers' Conclave in Capital, Page Two

DETECTIVE COLLEGE IDEA GIVEN STRONG BACKING

By JACK LAIT
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 10—As delegates to Attorney General Cummings' crime conference poured into the city, it became obvious that this must be only the first of such conclaves if any permanent and substantial results are to develop.

President Roosevelt will address the opening session of the assemblage tonight in Constitution Hall.

Since no such a gathering has ever been assembled before in this or any other civilized country, there are no standards for its work.

The 600 delegates include "experts" on every direct and collateral specialty having to do with crime prevention and correction. Each delegate regards his branch as holding the solution for the staggering problems which confront the nation.

CRIME COLLEGE URGED

Attorney-General Cummings, with the active co-operation of President Roosevelt, has summoned from all localities and many callings this extraordinary gathering to plan resistance against the hoodlum hordes of murderers, racketeers, kidnapers, hijackers and robbers whose publicly known exploits are only a minor percentage of the depredations with which law-enforcement officials are familiar.

Out of this initial assembly will come, however, a permanent body, an arm of the government which will probably be concretely expressed in several entirely new and revolutionary institutions, including:

A college for crime control, to train men in the various principal departments: a sort of West Point, perhaps issuing degrees, where young Americans will be taught all the scientific methods of detective work, marksmanship, finger-printing, ballistics and associated subjects.

A national police, a 48-time multiplied adaptation of the state trooper system, together with the best features of the Canadian Mounties, this body to have in its personnel experts in every division with an army of skilled privates qualified to shoot or fight it out with the toughest of the underworld desperados.

A more solidified and more official tie-up between national arms of the law and local police, for the interchange of data and union of power and duties that will make national police authorized officials in any part of the country and all city, state and county police sworn in as servants of the United States, so that they will have jurisdiction wherever their services are required.

In the shooting of John Dillinger, in Chicago, Federal Agent Melvin H. Purvis was accompanied by six officers from East Chicago, Indiana, typical policemen; yet these were not allowed to function in the actual capture, since they were not even permitted by formal law to carry arms in Illinois, let alone fire them. The rough work was left to men who had enlisted without the remotest intentions of ever doing any such duties.

CLERKS MET EMERGENCY

The man-power of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice is composed of lawyers and accountants. They were thus engaged in contemplation of tasks for which these studies fitted them.

Though pistol-practice was one of the items in their training, they were never dreamt of a few years ago as a body that would be called upon to match machine-gun prowess with the most accomplished and maniacal killers of the land.

The quick switch of what a few years ago were strictly local crimes into national jurisdiction by the speed of the airplane and automobile, laws embracing kidnaping and many forms of larcenies into interstate offenses, greatly increased robberies of national banks, found the federal government, with violent police problems to meet with a handful of trained clerks and lawyers.

That they went to it with heroic courage, inspired intelligence and memorable effectiveness is to the lasting glory of American brains. But that this splendid body is inadequate and unadapted for such volume and character of activities is still deplorably obvious.

The nucleus of a national police bureau is already here in the Department of Justice, where some six million finger-prints of criminals and respectable people are on file, where the problems of smaller police departments are ably and quickly solved for them, where contact is maintained with thousands of sheriffs, constables and police chiefs. But it is incomplete and unofficial.

Any police department that doesn't choose to avail itself on one hand or help out on the other when federal matters enter their territory, cannot be forced into the national-setup.

DUPONTS BARE BRIBES IN SALES OF MUNITIONS

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 10—An amazing picture of public corruption in Europe, the Orient and South America was revealed today at the Senate inquiry int othe world's munitions inquiry.

Correspondence from the files of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., showed munitions sales in Poland, Greece and the Balkan States were negotiated only by payment of large commissions.

Company officials frankly admitted that Chinese officials had to be bribed in all business deals.

ZAHAROFF NAMED

Sir Basil Zaharoff, Europe's mystery man, was drawn into the picture. One du Pont agent described Sir Basil's operations in selling munitio ..nThe mysterY man gave bribes and commissions on all sides, it was contended, always getting himself a large portion of the commissions.

The du Pont company fired a South American agent in 1921 who was "up to his neck" in bribes to Argentine government officials in a powder deal.

A du Pont official reported Argentine authorities felt the agent was "irresponsible" and were "afraid of him," because he went around publicly offering bribes. The agent, Alphonse Lissner, was dismissed. He failed to make the pa..

NYE CONTRADICTS HOOVER

Chairman Nye asked Lammot du Pont whether hise company hadn't influenced the 1925 arms conference.

This led to a dispute between Nye and Lammot du Pont as to whether De famous Hoover conference of gunmakers had been called at the instanuce of the State Department. The former President recently said it had been.

"I wish to very vigorously deny that the conference was called at the request of the State Department," said Nye.

BRIBERY WIDESPREAD

A. Felix duPont, executive of E. I. duPont DeNemours and Co., admitted there was widespread bribery of public officials in "certain countries" of the Orient. He did not name the countries, but previous evidence told of bribery of officials of the Chinese government.

"Bribery in certain Oriental countries is used in all walks of life," said du Pont. "It is the same in the muntions business as in any other business. It is accepted and not talked about very much. Outsid4s people could not trade in those countries without keeping up with this custom."

A letter from William N. Taylor, European representative of the company, in October, 1922, telling of bribe conditions in the Balkan countries was placed in the record.

Taylor hinted strongly that du Pont powder could be sold there only by payment of "commissions" to higa public officials.

HIRE OWN POLICE! CAN'T TRUST CITY

GHASTLY TRAIL OF CRIME OVER U. S. REVIEWED

By WINIFRED BLACK
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 10—Forty well known and highly respected Chicago businessmen are keeping armed police to protect not only themselves but their wives and children.

They can't trust the regular system of police protection at all.

They have to have courageous and well armed men, not only in their homes all night, but in their offices all day.

These men drive to and from home to business—and not one of these 40 citizens dares to go out for a sandwich and a cup of coffee or a salad and an entree at noon without his armed-to-the-teeth bodyguard by his side.

It isn't so long ago that the head of the milk supply company of Chicago turned his office into a fort with machine guns at every window and bullet proof walls.

Winifred Black

E. L. Cord of Auburn and American Airways has taken his family abroad because he thinks America is no place to keep helpless children.

The two grandchildren of Henry W. Taft were secretly shipped to a foreign country not so long ago because their parents had been warned that the kidnapers were after those children.

The moving picture studios in Hollywood are armed with machine guns and every well known star there has a bodyguard somewhere in attendance every hour of the day and night.

School Guards

One of the best known lawyers in America is a man who's pretty well capable of taking care of himself and his family—but he can't stand up against threatening letters and telephone messages got when his beautiful young daughter and his handsome young son are concerned.

His house is guarded night and day and his children go back and forth to school with good, capable, shoot-from-the-hip guards close beside or behind them.

There was a day not over 15 years ago when anyone of these facts would have created something almost like a revolution in any State in this Union.

Today we hear of them, frown, sigh and shake our heads—and that's that.

How long are we going to go on allowing ourselves to be the laughing stock of every thief and murderer and kidnaper in the country.

What's the matter with us Americans?

Have we completely lost our pride and self-respect?

What's become of the old-fashioned American grit and American pride and American loyalty?

Isn't it just about time for the young men of the day to stop grinning and saying:

"Well, he had the drop on me, so what could I do?"

That young man's father would have died before he would have permitted any cowardly gangster to shove a gun into his ribs and get away with it.

Are We Cowardly?

The gangster might have made a few well chosen remarks to your grandfather or mine and punctuated those remarks by the shove of a gun against grandpa's ribs, but grandpa would have knocked that gun out of his hand and beaten the thug over the head with it or he would have tried his best to do these things and never even consider for one minute that he ought to grin and say:

"Go to it young fellow."

What's happened to grandson?

Is he more cowardly than his grandfather?

Are we allowing the national stamina to be so worn down by common usage that none is capable of protecting himself but a criminal and a thug?

And what's happened to our public spirit and our sense of public duty?

A half-witted boy took a four-year-old baby and locked the child up in an ice cold room naked, where the poor little thing died of cold and fright and starvation.

The neighbors all knew that that boy was dangerous—why didn't they do something about it before he had a chance to work his mad will on this helpless child?

How about that moron who attacked his two little sisters and then pushed them into the refrigerator to die.

Everyone in the neighborhood knew that boy was always frightening children. Why didn't they insist that he be put somewhere where he could do no harm?

No indeed, not they.

They didn't want to "make trouble," so they just let the whole hideous thing happen and never even appeared to feel a qualm of conscience about it.

How about that little girl out in San Francisco who lost her little pet rabbit and went into a neighbor's basement to look for it and the man who lived in the house jumped out from behind a coal bin or something and murdered the child after he had brutally attacked her.

He had been convicted of just such an attack upon just such another helpless little girl—but he was out "on parole."

Wouldn't it be interesting to know just who got that man his parole and why they were so interested to see him set free?

Will this crime clinic that is meeting in Washington tomorrow go into this strange haunting business of parole as it is practiced today and do something practical about it?

Three-fourths of the professional criminals in this country have either been out on parole or are expecting to go out almost any day.

Who are the judges and the prosecuting attorneys and the criminal lawyers in general who have so willingly put these applications for parole for professional criminals?

Name Them

Let's get a few names, members of the criminal clinic, and let's have their addresses too, as well as the names.

And these lawyers who defend men who make a business of robbery and murder—how can the legal profession expect to be recognized as a fine and noble institution when out on bar associations shrug shoulders and smile cynically and say, "Oh well, what's the use?"

And how about that warden of the Western penitentiary who let two gangsters walk out of prison and take two guards with them, drive nearly a thousand miles and finally meet up with a real man who knew exactly what to do when he saw a hardened criminal escaping and carrying his "guards" along with him and did it?

What explanation was there behind those guards and their connivance at that escape?

There are so many things we plain, every-day folks would like to know—let's hope we'll hear some plain truth about them at the crime clinic here in Washington.

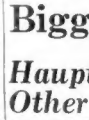
Hauptmann Trial Will Top Other U. S. Cases in Interest



J. L. Kilgallen

The Boston Evening American herewith presents the first of a series of 12 articles on the Lindbergh case by James L. Kilgallen, staff writer of International News Service. Kilgallen has covered virtually all of the big American courtroom dramas of the last 10 years and will be among the working press at the Hauptmann trial.

In this series, Kilgallen brings the celebrated case, with its many ramifications, up to date. The series is informative, exclusive and up-to-the-minute and affords a new insight into the cast of characters who will play leading roles in the forthcoming trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 10—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the furtive-looking poker-faced prisoner who occupies "Cell Number One" in the jail here, will be projected into the world spotlight on January 2 when he is placed on trial for his life on the charge of murdering Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

The man accused of "the crime of the century" stands alone as the defendant. So far as the state of New Jersey is concerned the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby was "a one man job." And they will try to prove Hauptmann was that man.

Final preparations for the celebrated trial are now in progress while the 36-year-old carpenter and ex-burglar languishes in jail and maintains a tight-lipped attitude. Both prosecution and defense have been active for weeks lining up witnesses and making exhaustive investigations.

Great Legal Drama Foreseen

And what a spectacle it will be when the curtain rises on this courtroom drama! The defendant, Hauptmann, sitting there in the courtroom pale and cold-eyed and surrounded by armed guards . . . A battery of legal talent . . . A brilliant assemblage of newspaper men and women, representing the press of the world . . . Two distinguished justices, in flowing black robes, looking down from the bench . . . Spectators craning their necks . . . Photographers, police officials, court attendants, visiting lawyers . . . The insistent, staccato clicking of scores of telegraph wires in nearby rooms, a clatter such as is heard at a championship prize fight or a world series.

This trial of Hauptmann promises to be one of the greatest legal dramas in the history of American jurisprudence. It will be bigger—from a press standpoint—than New Jersey's other famous murder trial, the Hall-Mills case at Somerville, N. J., seven or eight years ago. Bigger than the celebrated Snyder-Gray trial at Long Island City during the "jazz era."

It will top such widely-publicized cases as the trial of George Remus, former "king of the bootleggers," at Cincinnati, for the slaying of his wife, Imogene; the trial at Columbus of Dr. John H. Snook, University professor, for the murder of Miss Theora Hix, a co-ed; the famous Hickman case on the Pacific Coast or even the sensational trial in Chicago of Nathan Leopold and Dick Loeb for the murder of little Bobby Franks.

Trial Enlivens Whole Town

Not since the trial in New York of Harry K. Thaw for the killing of Stanford White has there been a courtroom drama that promises to attract such widespread attention.

The world spotlight, beginning January 2, will beat down with white light intensity upon the Hunterdon county court and day after day—perhaps for four or five weeks—the dateline "Flemington, N. J." will be emblazoned on front pages of newspapers all over the universe.

Flemington, which is about an hour and 20 minutes by train from New York city, is considerably worked up over the impending trial. It's going to mean a lot to the town, financially. The influx of visitors figures to pull this town of 4000 population out of the depression.

Every room in the hotel across from the courthouse has been engaged for the duration of the trial. Private homes all over Flemington will take in guests.

The metropolitan newspapers have taken over stores and private homes for work rooms. One New York paper has rented the Country Club to quarter its staff.

Prices of rooms, meals and refreshments have jumped in Flemington. The townsfolk have learned that newspaper men are liberal spenders and are acting accordingly. Expenses accounts of reporters and photographers are going to make the chiefs of accounting departments gasp.

N.Y. CITY BEGINS SALES TAX

By Universal Service

New York, Dec. 10—City officials stressed a final admonition that the 2 per cent sales tax, which goes into effect throughout the city today, must be passed on to the consumer without any attempt at disguise or sugar-coating.

Simultaneously plans were revealed to amend the bill by making it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine, for any buyer to refuse to pay the tax.

City Collector William Reid said: "It should be stressed that the law requires that the tax not be hidden in any way. Some retailers seem to be under the impression that the tax can be hidden in the price or that the seller can absorb it in overhead. The law specifically prohibits this."

Wood Expert Finds Bruno Link to Kidnap Ladder

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 10—Two pieces of wood, one a rung in the Lindbergh kidnap ladder, the other taken from Bruno Richard Hauptmann's home, were joined by a state expert today—and found to fit perfectly.

In the report of Arthur Kohler, wood expert, officials saw proof of Hunterdon County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr.'s, assertion that the state has found "important new evidence" which will "definitely tie Hauptmann to the electric chair."

The stick of wood from Hauptmann's home reposes beside the ladder in the State's gallery of evidence to be produced for exhibit when Hauptmann goes on trial January 2 for the Lindbergh kidnap-killing.

Frederick A. Pope, associate defense counsel, refused to believe the report of Kohler's findings. He said:

"If this were true, it would have been disclosed months ago."

Kohler, associated with the U. S. forestry service laboratory at Madison, Wis., examined the kidnap ladder minutely for months before linking it to Hauptmann's home.

Defense attorneys, meanwhile, pressed their demands for a full bill of particulars. Pope said he would appear this week before Supreme Court Justice Thomas A. Trenchard, the trial judge, to ask a writ forcing the State to comply.

LOST MOODY BOY FOUND

Mrs. Helen G. Moody of Derry, N. H., left here early today for Washington, where her son, John G. Moody, Dartmouth College sophomore, has been found in a hospital.

The young student was discovered by John M. Clark, a Dartmouth alumnus who was checking hospitals as he went about his duties on a Washington paper. Moody has been missing from college for a week and was discovered in the streets a victim of amnesia.

Meanwhile, the intensive search for David S. Low, 16, of Hanover, N. H., who disappeared the day following Moody's departure, is being continued. It is believed that the son of Professor Fletcher Low, of Dartmouth, was hitch-hiking to Florida.

DIVORCE For Wife of AUTHOR

BAY STATE WIFE FREED FRIDAY

GRINSTEADS HAD HOME HERE ON NORTH SHORE

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 10—Marriage ties that held them together while they made their home in some of the world's capitals have been broken for Durward Grinstead, author and former diplomat, and his socially prominent wife.

A divorce was granted Mrs. Grinstead in superior court here last Friday, it was disclosed today. She was given custody of their two minor daughters. A poperty settlement had been reached prior to the court action.

She charged Grinstead, who married her in Washington, D. C., in 1918, with cruelty and incompatibility. Mrs. Grinstead, the former Gladys Safford, daughter of a Springfield, Mass., attorney, retained the Beverly Hills residence. Grinstead is living at the University Club.

Grinstead, a native of Louisville, Ky., was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1916. He practised law in Chicago and at one time was assistant legal counsel for the Council of National Defense.

Lived Here

Soon after the World War he married Mrs. Grinstead and settled in Washington where he was an attorney. In 1925, he entered the United States diplomatic service, serving as vice consul in Dresden. Later he became third secretary at Warsaw.

He resigned in 1929 to devote himself to a career as author, taking his family to Manchester-on-the-sea in Massachusetts. There Grinstead wrote his first novel, "Elva," a story of New England life.

About two years ago he and his family moved to Southern California, purchasing a pretentious home in Beverly Hills.

Barefoot Dance for Church!

SOCIETY GIRL WILL EXPRESS 'FEELING'

Dancing barefooted, Miss Eleanor Schirmer, 23-year-old Newton society girl, will give a series of six interpretive dances at the Union Congregational church, South End, next Sunday for the first time in the history of a Boston church.

Only a few months ago, Miss Erica Thimey, German dancer, gave a similar performance in a Waltham church. The comment was mostly favorable, and the Waltham church was host to a large number of clergymen.

Miss Schirmer, who teaches dancing, believes that she can bring more religion into her dances than Miss Thimey did.

"She was too pantomimic," Miss Schirmer said. "I intend to pour all the feeling I receive from the great music of Bach, Beethoven and Schubert into my dance."

WILL "FIGHT TO FINISH" TO KEEP BABE ALL YEAR

Los Angeles, Dec. 10—The Los Angeles Times in a copyright story says the blonde Ann Harding of the screen plans a 'fight to finish' with her divorced husband, Harry Bannister, for the exclusive custody of their six-year-old daughter, Jane.

The actress is in Reno, Nev., and according to the Times, will institute proceedings there without delay to obtain custody of the child for the full 12 months of the year instead of the 10 month period granted when the actress and her actor-husband were divorced a year ago.

QUINTUPLETS' DOCTOR GASPS AT SIGHTS

By International News Service

New York, Dec. 10—Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, the country doctor who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world and now has come to New York to see what he can see, gazed upon two sights today that gave him a thrill.

The Empire State Building.

Al Smith.

"Always wanted to meet Governor Smith. Always wanted to see his building," the good doctor told his guides, and, presto, it was done.

First stop was in Al's office, where both men appeared a little uncertain about just what to say.

Al led off with:

"How are all the little quintuplets," (he pronounced it quintriplets, but the doctor didn't seem to mind).

"They're fine," said Dr. Dafoe, who can talk to reporters, but is shy about meeting big names.

"If Theodore Roosevelt were alive, they'd have his picture on the wall," observed Smith. "He liked big families. By the way, what do the Birth Controllers think about this?"

"I don't know," said the doctor.

"Well," continued Al, switching to politics, "just think of the vote in that family!"

"Hm," from the doctor.

Following the preliminaries, Dr. Dafoe and Smith went up to the observation tower, where the doctor was properly impressed.

"I don't believe it," he said, waving his hand at the metropolis. "But I enjoy looking at it any. I have great respect for mankind when I see these wonderful buildings."

His first day here was just as thrilling.

He revealed he had not expected the birth of five children, and that Mrs. Dionne, whoes six previous offsprings had come singly, was equally unaware of the extent to which she was to add to her family six months ago.

Asked what Mrs. Dionne, who was unconscious during the births, said when told she had been delivered of quintuplets, Dr. Dafoe replied:

"She clasped her hands and weakly cried 'Holy Mary.'"

What He Said

Dr. Dafoe said his first remark, addressed to the ..eighboring housewife who was Mrs. Dionne's only attendant until he arrived, was simply:

"Good God, woman, put on some hot water!"

A smiling little man, dressed in a $25 suit bought with his total fee for delivering and caring for the quintuplets, Dr. Dafoe arrived here by train from Canada on his first visit to the East and his second trip out of the Canadian wilderness in 29 years.

He was immediately whisked under police motorcycle escort to lower Manhattan and taken for a five-cent ferry ride down the bay to Staten Island.

On his return trip up the bay he passed the Statue of Liberty and Ellis and Governors Islands, and got his first view of the Manhattan skyline. Then he was taken by subway to Times square, whence he rode in a taxicab to the Ritz. He commented:

"It's a great place.. It's size impresses me. I had wanted to ride your subways and see your great buildings. Now I want to meet Al Smith, see the zoo and a night club—Yes, I might as well see what they're like, now that I'm here, I might like them. Then I'll go home Friday or Saturday."

Dr. Dafoe's mention of night clubs led to a question. Did he believe American women who spent much of their time in night clubs, at bridge, and at other pursuits lessen their physical potentialities as mothers. He answered quickly:

"I don't know anything about it. Up North all they do is have big families."

Dr. Dafoe denied reports Mrs. Dionne is anticipating the birth of another child, declaring:

MARY GARDEN, MRS. CAMPBELL IN FEUD OVER COLOR OF HAIR

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 10—Mary Garden, the singer, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, were in the throes of a feud today about hair—blonde hair and black hair.

WHAT COLOR, PLEASE, WAS HAIR OF MELISANDE?

MARY GARDEN

Miss Garden started the trouble last week in bursting forth with criticism over the fact that years ago Mrs. Campbell, who has black hair, played the role of Melisande in the "Pellas and Melisande" play, and didn't wear a blonde wig. She charged Mrs. Campbell's hair looked "unclean."

Miss Garden herself, wearing a blonde wig, created the role of Melisande in Claude Achille Debussy's operatic version of the play. She is distinctly titian-haired off stage.

Today Mrs. Campbell, who now lives in Hollywood, retorted:

"It would be quite impossible for me to take Miss Garden's remarks seriously. After all, such remarks belong in the domain of cheap publicity.

"However, it is not possible that Miss Garden misunderstands the spirit of the poetic play, 'Pellas and Melisande,' that is, the play was written by Maurice Maeterlinck? Undoubtedly she is well acquainted with opera and operatic traditions, but they are something quite apart from the poetic drama."

COAL, CLOTHES 2 Big Needs of Poor, Says Fr. Barry

Rev. Robert P. Barry, head of The Catholic Charitable Bureau, told a meeting of the members of the Particular Council of Boston of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul that the two most essential needs among the poor are coal and warm clothing.

He urged his listeners to aid the Emergency Campaign for 1935 as the most direct way of helping the poor.

Fr. Barry said that the clothing made under the auspices of the ERA could be relied upon to take care of but three per cent of the needs.

Atheism and Communism are spreading in the United States, according to Rev. Jonea I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of social ethics at Boston College, who warned that only the united front of religion can save the country from ruin.

IN VEINS Arthritis STARTS

CURE IS FOUND FOR DISEASE

LEG TREATMENT KILLS SOURCE OF ILLNESS

Copyright, 1934, by International News Service

New York, Dec. 10—European scientists have become convinced that an American physician has at last discovered what may be the basic cause of arthritis, or rheumatism, and also that he has devised a treatment that may develop into a positive cure for the disease in its earlier and middle stages, it was disclosed today.

Hitherto, the disease, which afflicts hundreds of thousands of persons, has been found incurable in the large majority of cases. Most of the arthritis patients are permanently crippled; many find themselves deformed and bedridden in the later stages, and all suffer acute pain.

In addition, the sufferer from more advanced types of rheumatism often is afflicted with heart disease, an infection of the heart valves resulting from the same bacterial invasion which causes arthritis.

Source in Legs

The American physician, Dr. Otto Meyer, of this city, claims the principal focal source of the bacterial poisons which cause the secondary rheumatic condition is in the deep veins of the legs of the victims.

Dr. Meyer had found that rheumatic conditions nearly always persisted or grew progressively worse, even after abscessed teeth and diseased tonsils had been removed and after other suspected or proven focal infections had been cleared up or ruled out.

This caused him to suspect there was another focal source of infection, or "poison factory" in the bodies of most of these patients.

Several pathologists at German hospitals checked this discovery while performing autopsies on persons who had died both from arthritis and endocarditis. They confirmed Dr. Meyer's contention that a phlebitic condition was nearly always present in the leg veins of these victims.

Develops Treatment

Dr. Meyer then developed his treatment of phlebitis. When this inflammation of the veins was cured, he found that the rheumatic condition disappeared as if by magic.

The treatment is simple. The feet and the legs are swathed in bandages which are heavy enough to exert continued pressure against the skin and flesh and are yet light enough to permit movement and walking. In most cases the patients are ordered to walk as far as they can, up to a distance of three miles each day.

The effect of this sort of treatment on one patient was reported recently by Dr. Carl Ludwig Schmidt of Hamburg. Dr. Schmidt stated that the patient not only was able to walk and make any other leg movement without pain after 14 days of the treatment, but was rid of an acute infection of his tonsils when he left the bed.

Mrs. Vanderbilt a Clerk? May Have to Seek Job

MOVE TO HALT HER ONLY INCOME BRINGS "POVERTY" PERIL

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 10—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, widow of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt and mother of wealthy 10-year-old Gloria, whose custody was recently won by her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, may be compelled to spend the Christmas holidays working in a department store!

An intimate friend so informed Universal Service here, charging a "concerted effort" to reduce Mrs Vanderbilt, one of the famous Morgan twins, to "abject poverty."

A little-noticed court move made by George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist, her former attorneys and co-custodians of the child's $2,800,000 trust fund, was the basis of the charge.

Wickersham and Gilchrist are laying the groundwork, Mrs. Vanderbilt's friend said, for an argument before the New York County Surrogate that they be permitted to stop paying Mrs. Vanderbilt $1000 a month, which was allowed in a surrogate's order. This sum has been advanced from the income of little Gloria's inheritance.

Of this sum, Mrs. Vanderbilt has been paying $250 a month to her mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan who, incidentally, denied recently she had been assured continued payment of this amount after she testified against her daughter.

U. S. PUSHES WAR ON DOPE

MORE ARRESTS ARE DUE; NEW LAWS PLANNED

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 10—With 765 persons arrested in the government's spectacular offensive against the drug traffic, the Federal Narcotics Bureau today laid plans to apprehend hundreds of additional pedlars who eluded the dragnet spread by its 250 agents from Maine to Hawaii during the last three days.

Working in co-operation with local authorities, the agents today questioned all those taken into custody since Friday, when the sweeping drive was started. They expect to obtain considerable information that will lead to further wholesale arrests, according to Louis Ruppel, deputy commissioner of narcotics.

"A majority of the men and women who are addicted to dope will give us valued information concerning the pedlars," Ruppel stated. "Deprived of their source of supply, some of the unfortunates lodged in jail undoubtedly will tell the authorities everything they know about the dope trade in their communities."

THREAT SUFFICIENT

Ruppel said it was not the government's intention to use strong arm methods in gleaning information from the addicts. Mere threats that they will not receive any more drugs unless they disclose the sources from which they received done before being arrested is expected to suffice in loosening the tongues of addicts in many instances.

The bureau plans to send all the arrested addicts to hospitals, where they may be rehabilitated. The most serious cases eventually will be sent to the government narcotics farm at Lexington, Ky., which will begin operation in March.

Although jubilant over the results of the initial blow against the drug traffic—the greatest ever staged—Harry Anslinger, chief of the narcotics bureau, said the courts must co-operate to the fullest extent in the government's campaign.

The bureau hopes to obtain felony convictions involving violation of the Federal Narcotics act against at least 500 of the 765 already taken into custody.

NEW LAWS URGED

Aroused over the shocking ramifications of the dope traffic and the misery which grips its victims, several members of Congress pledged their support of legislation giving the government additional power to curb the activities of illicit drug vendors.

Senator McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada, plans to introduce a bill vesting in the government the right to revoke licenses of physicians who issue large quantities of narcotics prescriptions.

Senator Sheppard, Democrat, of Texas, will support the McCarran measure, while Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, will sponsor legislation tightening the provisions of the Harrison Narcotics Act. Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, also urged adoption of more drastic laws to crush the dope evil.

"I am shocked at the spread of the use of drugs in this country," he said. "Even children are not immune. I will support any effective method for stamping out this vice."

Another development of the government campaign was the disclosure that large quantities poured into the United States from Manchukuo and other Oriental sources.

Kaye Don, Speeder, Freed From Jail

Douglas, Isle of Man, Dec. 10 (AP)—Kaye Don, famous British speed driver, was released today after serving 10 weeks and two days of a four months' sentence for manslaughter growing from the death of his mechanic in a wreck on a trial auto spin.

Ill health, it was stated officially, was the reason for Don's early release.

Francis Tayler, Don's mechanic, was killed when they took a night practice run for a race in Douglas May 28.

They base their identification on personal possessions of Prihoda, which matched articles found beside the skeleton. Death was due to natural causes, it is believed.

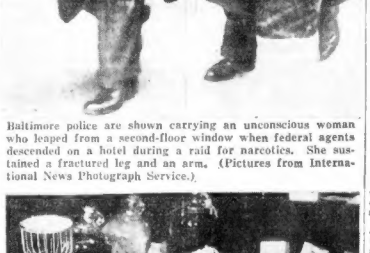
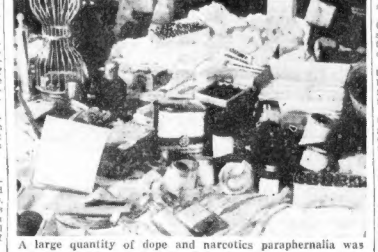
Cleanup in Dope Drive

Baltimore police are shown carrying an unconscious woman who leaped from a second-floor window when federal agents descended on a hotel during a raid for narcotics. She sustained a fractured leg and an arm. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)



A large quantity of dope and narcotics paraphernalia was seized in Baltimore when the federal government opened its nation-wide drive against the illicit drug traffic. Here gambling implements, guns, ammunition and narcotics are shown after the law's agents had made their first roundup.



Mrs. Elizabeth Bass, Chicago narcotic supervisor, is snown above with some of the dope seized in raids in her district. Mrs. Bass has already made 300 arrests in Illinois and Indiana. She is being sent additional help by the federal government and she will soon extend her activities to Milwaukee.

Peabody Santa Hermit Is Found Dead in Cottage

Peabody, Dec. 10.—Edward Price Hinckley, 75-year-old eccentric, known as "Santa Claus" because of his long flowing white hair and beard, died of heart disease and not at the hands of a slayer, Medical Examiner S. Chase Tucker, said today.

The elderly man was found dead last night in his six-room cottage off Bartholomew street, after he had been heard to cry for help and an automobile had driven away.

Police believe that Hinckley, who had given many gay parties for young folk in the cottage, refused entrance to a party last night and that the visitors, perhaps under the influence of liquor, had broken two windows in the cottage, so exciting the elderly man that he became excited, aried for help and then collapsed.

An autopsy by Dr. Tucker, however, revealed that several bruises and disclosed that several bruises on the body were several days old.

An automobile had driven away.

European ports to Boston and to illicit narcotic depots in various parts of the nation, according to Supervisor Burrows.

Because of the information, certain incoming ships are being watched for and will be searched when they arrive in Boston.

Nine more suspected addicts and pedlars were under arrest today in New England as the raids continued in this district as part of the nationwide drive, and agents were preparing for a final cleanup.

Raids in Providence and Hartford added to the total rounded up in this district in the drive ordered by federal narcotics commissioner, Harry J. Anslinger.

Concentrated action to suppress the narcotic traffic here will be continued indefinitely, according to Burrows. He said:

"The drive is not over yet, by any means. We are determined to stamp out the illicit narcotic racket. All agents in New England have been told that we expect them to clean up their districts.

765 IN CUSTODY

"While conditions in New England are not as bad as in some other sections, in the past 14 months we have made large seizures in heroin, cocaine and opium, and have put many narcotic sellers to prison. We intend to keep plugging."

In the country at large the drive was hailed as the most telling blow ever struck against the narcotics racket.

In Washington Harry J. Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics, said telegrams reporting latest results still were pouring into his office.

Reports from the various districts showed that nearly 1000 persons were in custody. This was the largest roundup of the kind ever achieved.

The coast-to-coast coup was said by officials to be the greatest single blow ever struck the narcotics traffic. Seizures were valued at many thousands of dollars.

In the midst of the drive, the treasury was planning to ask Congress for new police powers for choking the illicit narcotics trade, together with new authority for combatting bootleggers of liquor.

Among those arrested were men with records as forgers, counterfeiters, bank robbers and murderers, according to Deputy Commissioner Louis Ruppel. In Boston, he said, 15 out of 20 prisoners seized had previous records for pedling or addiction.

The need for strengthening laws against traffickers in illicit narcotics was voiced by the authorities of many of those arrested. In Louisville, Kentucky, reports said that pedlars jeered at agents when arrested, the courts in that section being considered so tolerant that the prisoners had little to worry about.

ARRESTED 90 TIMES

In New Orleans, among those arrested was Harold Normandale who had a record of 90 previous arrests in the last seven years on charges ranging from narcotic violations to murder.

Here in Boston, 11 of the suspects taken were released. When arrested they had no narcotics in their possession although several of them were suspected of being pedlers as well as addicts.

Among the narcotic victims arrested were 178 women. Authorities said a high wounded startling conditions of degradation induced by the use of the narcotics.

Pedlers, particularly in Cleveland, Ohio, were exposed as teaching children the use of narcotics.

At Norrow, Virginia, a 50-year-old man, arrested as a long time addict and suspected pedlar, confessed he had recently persuaded his 19-year-old son to share his habit. The son was held for medical treatment.

CURATIVE MEASURES

Most of those arrested as addicts, Commissioner Anslinger said, will next spring be sent to a new curative farm, to be opened in March by the government at Lexington, Kentucky. Efforts will be made to send up pedlars for long terms in federal penitentiaries, he declared.

Anslinger said:

"We have dealt the traffic a crippling blow, but the fight is far from won. Our staff has proved itself efficient enough to cope with the dealers. The issue now is up to the courts. Dealers should be sent up for long prison terms and their victims sent to curative institutions."

Meanwhile the commissioner hopes to turn the cravings of victims to good purpose. With major illicit sources of narcotics dried up, he believes they will aid authorities in the up to the courts. Dealers drugs, medically administered.

The astounding results of these raids brought renewed demands in congressional circles for passage of additional legislation to strengthen the arm of the federal government in stamping out the dope traffic.

Baltimore, Dec. 10—The death of a 50-year-old woman as the result of a week-end narcotics raid went under police investigation today.

Mrs. Fanny Stein, who jumped from a second story window of the hotel as agents entered her room, died yesterday. Narcotic agents had not sought Mrs. Stein as a member of the dope peddling ring, but they found in her room a quantity of women's clothing they suspected was stolen.

LAVAL ANNOUNCES PEACE SETTLEMENT IN BALKANS

Geneva, Dec. 10—The Balkan controversy between Yugoslavia and Hungary has been settled, Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France announced today.

Laval's announcement came near the end of a day of heated debate in which Czechoslovakia had threatened to quit the League of Nations Council unless this body acted immediately and with vigor in the powder-keg Balkan affair.

The threat was made in a speech before the council by Dr. Edouard Benes, Czechoslovakian foreign minister.

Speaking in behalf of the little entente generally and of Czechoslovakia in particular, Dr. Benes said:

CALLS FOR JUSTICE

"The council ought to give me justice, because by signing the League covenant I renounced taking justice into my own hands.

"The council ought to have the courage to pronounce justice politically. The council thereafter could impose conciliation and appeasement which fell into its role.

"If the council does not have this political courage, we will leave here, and peace will perhaps be compromised."

The Czechoslovakian delegation hastened to explain that Dr. Benes' last sentence did not mean Czechoslovakia would leave the League of nations entirely if the council failed to act vigorously, but merely that she might resign her council seat.

In lew of the precarious turn the day-long debate took at this point, the three chief delegates, Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France; Captain Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, and Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy, all left the council chamber and went into an anteroom for a hasty conference.

TAKE RESOLUTION

They carried with them the text of a resolution which was believed aimed at appeasing the Little Entente, for which Dr. Benes is the principal spokesman. Shortly after their withdrawal, they invited Foreign Minister De Kanya of Hungary to join them.

After conclusion of this conference, the principals returned to the council chamber, where Laval announced settlement of the row.

Yugoslavia Halts Hungarian Exodus

Belgrade, Dec. 10 (INS)—With Hungary's cause gaining considerable international sympathy due to Yugoslavia's ejection of nearly 3000 Hungarians, Prince Paul, head of King Peter's regency council, today ordered the expulsions halted forthwith.

Prince Paul had just returned from Paris by way of Geneva, and was in close touch with the threatening European situation.

His action has greatly eased the situation, although it is evident that, with Prince Paul's approval, the cabinet is resolutely going ahead with its demands for an accounting with Hungary for that country's alleged interest in the killing of King Alexander.

Harvard Medical Trio Receive Nobel Awards in Sweden

By Associated Press

Stockholm, Sweden, Dec. 10—Four Americans and one Italian were honored here today in the 1934 Nobel prize awards, while at Oslo, Norway, the peace prize went to Arthur Henderson, Great Britain's president of the world disarmament conference.

The award in medicine is shared by three Americans. The fourth award to an American was for accomplishments in chemistry. The other award goes to Luigi Pirandello, Italian novelist and playwright.

Three of the Americans who received the honors are here for the presentation. They are Doctors George Minot and William P. Murphy of the Harvard University Medical School, and Dr. George H Whipple of the University of Rochester, joint winners of the award in medicine.

Dr. Harold Clayton Urey of Columbia university, whose discovery of "heavy water" won him the chemistry prize, was unable to attend the ceremony. Lauren Steinhardt, United States Minister to Sweden, acted as his representative.

The four Americans receive a total of more than $80,000 with the three physicians sharing a $41,318 prize.

Dr. Minot, Murphy and Whipple won distinction for their research finding relating to the treatment of anemia. The award to Pirandello, worth approximately $41,318, was made in recognition of his general contribution to letters.

Englishmen Receive Nobel Peace Prize

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 10—The Nobel Peace Prizes for 1933 and 1934 were awarded to two Englishmen today. Sir Norman Angell, author and lecturer, and Arthur Henderson, president of the world disarmament conference, respectively.

Henderson attended the ceremony at the Nobel Institute to receive the award, while the British Minister to Norway accepted on behalf of Sir Norman, who was detained in London on business.

Crown Prince Olaf of Norway was among the distinguished persons who composed the audience.

SLAYER INSANE, BISHOP SAYS

A directed verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity will be sought in the state Middlesex Superior Court Thursday against Mitchell J. Gondek, self-confessed slayer of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Caouette of Lowell last June, District Attorney Warren L. Bishop revealed today.

The announcement by Bishop was made following a conference with Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of the state department of mental diseases. Dr. Briggs stated that an examination of Gondek, the confessed slayer, showed him insane.

The alienist also filed a detailed report of his examination with the Clerk of Courts.

Huge Increases Shown in 'Big Salary' Figures

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 10—Salaries of executives of big corporations were shown today in registration statements filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission to have jumped 200 per cent in some instances this year, while others remained stationary or increased less sharply.

The reports ranged from an unchanged remuneration of $86,740 in 1933 and 1934 for E. M. Allen, president of Mathieson Alkali Works, to the $47,286 which Vice-President Daniel K. Weiskopf of National Distillers Products Corporation will receive his year against $15,640 in 1933.

In view of these figures, required in the filing of security registration statements with the commission and the efforts in an act of Congress to bring down excessive salaries and give investors more light, commission officials are considering a move to extend the salary reporting requirement to top officials of all corporations. No new law would be required.

Meanwhile, a report of another governmental agency, the Internal Revenue Bureau, disclosed last night that net incomes of a million dollars or more increased from 20 in 1932 to 46 last year.

Officials of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston enjoyed no increases. Walter C. Baylies, president, got $32,400 in both years. Thomas K. Cummings, treasurer, and Sidney Hosmer, general manager, were paid $20,700 and Leavitt L. Edgar, vice president, $18,000.

Gambling Racket Taking Heavy Toll on Worker

sum involved weekly at $13,800,000 for the first part of December—an average of from 10 million dollars weekly early in November increasing toward the 14 million dollar mark—520 million dollars to 780 million dollars a year!

The figures do not include stock market investments, those in which the majority of stock is bought for long terms. But they do include Wall Street estimate that strictly speculative purchases in the United States last week amounted to five million dollars!

From the gambling "palaces" on the outskirts of the big cities, to the back rooms of small country towns; from the $1000-a-turn roulette wheels to the five-cents-a-chance lottery; from bunko to bridge to bagatelle to backgammon—Americans are tossing their hard-earned money at the feet of the goddess of chance, and taking an awful trimming!

Police throughout the nation are retreating from the onslaught. In some cities they have driven most of the big gamblers to cover, as in New York, Washington and Philadelphia.

But in others, like Boston and Chicago, the "big shots" are working without hinderance.

TAKE A LOOK AT THE MAP:

NEW YORK—Millions wagered daily; illegal bookmakers working under cover because of police drive; Metropolitan area spotted with gambling palaces catering to the "evening dress" trade; petty gambling taking $50,000 or more a week; policy, pools and sweepstakes $70,000 or more; "reform" administration desperate over continued gambling.

CHICAGO—Wide-open, police ignore gambling; "palaces" ready for any stranger in town; women betting as high as $50,000 on the turn of a card; huge "policy" intake.

BOSTON—Hundreds of thousands wagered daily with "pool" operators, illegal bookmakers and lottery runners. Sweepstakes from foreign lands reap a harvest almost weekly. "Mobs" in the North End levy tribute on gambling throughout the city.

No concerted drive against any form of gambling has been started in months, although small time policy agents have been arrested occasionally. The city is dotted with "bookmaking establishments" and places of chance, all operating practically without police interference.

RACING LEGALIZED

Horse and dog racing legalized by mandate of the voting public to lower taxation and to offset the flow of millions into the parimutuel machines of New Hampshire and Rhode Island where such gambling is legal.

WASHINGTON: Clean-up crusade underway, but petty gambling continuing despite police; the biggest Eastern gambling palace, "Jimmy's," operating across state line; newspapers and public fighting gamblers as result of Paper Carrier's murder.

PHILADELPHIA: Thousands of dollars lost daily on "numbers" game.

RENO: Recently "wide open" with wealthy and poor patronizing same "dens."

MIAMI: "Hot" with influx of winter residents various kinds of gambling reaping huge nets.

LOS ANGELES: "Tight as a drum" this week, but reported gambling in area costing 20 million dollars a year.

An interesting sidelight, and one of the few official figures available, is the announcement of the Mexican government that Americans spent 22 million dollars in the big gambling casinos there this year.

And they mean millions of dollars' loss to Americans.

ADMITS BEATING GIRL TO DEATH

Confession that he punched and kicked his supposed fiance to death in his room was made today, according to police, by Nicia Mastrangelo, 48, of Waterford street, South End, just before he was arraigned in municipal court on a murder charge.

Mrs. Mann Harris of Des Moines, Ia., wife of a wrestler, known in the South End, however, as Miss Anna M. Svendson of Mystic street, South End, was found dead in Mastrangelo's room last Friday.

In his declared confession today, Mastrangelo told police that he and the woman had been drinking early on Tuesday and that after he had diluted some alcohol with water, he handed her a glass of water instead.

"She threw it at me," Mastrangelo said, according to police, "I got mad and punched her in the face. She fell down and I kicked her until she didn't move any more."

In municipal court, Mastrangelo waived examination on the murder charge and was held without bail for the January sitting of the grand jury.

Six Convicts Flee Jail in Georgia

Jonesboro, Ga., Dec. 10 (AP)—Six white convicts, cutting through iron bars with saws, which Sheriff L. T. Lawrence said he believed was smuggled in by visitors, fled the Clayton County Jail here late last night.

A search was being launched in three states for them today.

POPE AIRS FAITH IN ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Vatican City, Dec. 10—Pope Pius today expressed hope that, under President Roosevelt's leadership, conditions in the United States would become normal with a decline of unemployment.

His Holiness expressed this hope to Bishop Joseph F. Busch of St. Cloud, Minn., during a half hour's audience.

The Pope asked many questions concerning the situation in the United States and requested details of the jubilee celebration of George Cardinal Mundelein in Chicago, which Bishop Busch attended.

Vatican City, Dec. 10 (AP)—Pope Pius granted an audience today to Frank E. Gannett, American newspaper publisher, and members of his party.

Faces 4th Trial as Tipsy Driver

Brockton, Dec. 10—Although Edward L. Owens, 33, of Rockland avenue, has been arrested three times previously for alleged drunken driving and was given a jail sentence in October, he still has his driving license, it was disclosed today when he was arraigned on a fourth charge.

In Brockton District Court, Owens, a telephone company worker, pleaded not guilty today to charges of drunkenness and drunken operating. His case was continued until December 19 for hearing.

YUGOSLAVIA TO ASK ADEQUATE SATISFACTION

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Berlin, Dec. 10—"Peace depends upon Yugoslavia's being given adequate satisfaction against Hungary in Geneva."

This bellicose keynote was again struck by Nationalist Belgrade newspapers in the war clou' which so suddenly shifted from the Saar to that stormy center in the Balkans.

Under the strong pressure of admonition from Britain and France, the Yugoslav government promised immediately to cease the expulsions of Hungarians from Yugoslav territory which has been attended by hardships and even brutalities, especially for women and small children.

At the same time, Premier Mussolini is understood to have used his influence with the Hungarian government, expressing the hope that it would restrain hotheads and prevent reprisals.

Hungarian authorities at Budapest confirmed that no more refugees had been sent across the border from Yugoslavia.

The Hungarian press professed to be content with the action taken at Geneva, while Yugoslav newspapers were more belligerent in their campaign against Hungary, because of the dilatory tactics of the League of Nations Council in dealing with Belgrade's charges that Hungary harbored the assassins of King Alexander.

The Hungarians, obviously remembering that it was the Serbians who assassinated the Archduke Ferdinand, and his wife, the Countess Sophie, at Sarajevo, in June, 1914, which set a spark to the world, are not soft spoken, either, about their Serbian neighbors, who seem ready to launch another conflict to avenge what they call their "national honor."

With Germany diligently courting Yugoslavia in the hope of eventually winning it away from the Little Entente, and, on the other hand, being close friends of Hungary, the German press—government controlled—is dealing with news of the conflict in the most delicate manner so as to offend neither side.

While the League is seeking to avert war in the "bad weather corner" of the Balkans, more than 15,000 were reported killed in the last few days in battles between the Chinese Nationalist troops and Chinese Communist forces, Paraguayan-Bolivian Gran Chaco hostilities continue and Abyssinia charges that Italian troops have invaded the territory of the descendants of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba and threatens to appeal to the League.

Tighe Kin Found Dead in Revere

Apparently dead since Saturday night, the body of John V. Fitzgerald, 65, father-in-law of Police Chief Edward J. Tighe of Revere, was found in a community garage in the rear of the Revere police station today.

According to a preliminary examination by Dr. Harry L. Masters of Revere, Fitzgerald died of a heart disorder as he was about to start a week end trip he had planned.

letters of the alphabet loaded on your back at once.

It may interest you to know what the wisest politicians in Washington are now discussing, and consider a most important political development. They put it in seven words.

"THE NEGROES HAVE LEARNED TO VOTE DEMOCRATIC."

They have come to realize that Abraham Lincoln is dead and buried, whereas Franklin D. Roosevelt is alive, and distributing bakesheesh. Much power in bakesheesh.

Congressman Mitchell, from Chicago, who will take his seat among the lawmakers in a few days, is the first Democratic colored man ever sent to Congress. And do not overlook the fact, pointed out by the very able Frank Hitchcock, who was postmaster-general: "In several important states the colored vote holds the balance of power."

And the President himself, amazing in his physical vigor and incisive, penetrating speech, after nearly two years of work and responsibility that might have ruined a dozen ordinary men. You hear him make a speech, and for the third or fourth time, having seen him three or four times altogether, you realize that he is in every way a much greater man than you thought. He is great in his power of restrained, effective speech, and reminds you of a big engine exhibited at the Centennial Exposition. Its demonstrator repeated each day "it can crack a hickory nut with safety for your fingers, or flatten out a heavy bar of steel."

Millions of Americans will be delighted to hear that the President's health is perfect, his physical strength abundant, promising a long life, and his courage limitless.

Those who believed that national escape from depression troubles depends on the continued health of the President need not worry.

into the Fish Pier covered with snow and ice. The snow was gathered on the Grand Banks during a heavy storm at sea Thursday and Friday, they reported.

In the colder spots near Boston, Bedford and Carlisle each had 2 below readings at 8 a. m. Attleboro, Lincoln, Lexington and Concord were 2 above zero. Ice in some of the smaller ponds froze to the depth of several inches.

Death, for which the cold was directly responsible, came to three more persons yesterday, bringing the total to five since the thermometer started down.

George A. Parsons, 65, of Williams avenue, Lynn, collapsed at St. Joseph's Church, Lynn, where he was attending mass, and died at Lynn Hospital.

Mrs. Mary A. Allen, 70, of Ocean street, Lynn, similarly collapsed at mass in St. John's Church, Swampscott. In both cases death was due to exhaustion induced by the cold.

John Omulak, 18, of Alger street, Brockton, dropped dead while attempting to crank an auto near his home.

Saved from death in a thrilling rescue by the coast guard cutter Ossipee, the crew of the fishing vessel Richard J. Nunan were safe in port at Portland, Me., today.

The engine of their vessel broke down off Boone Island and for 16 hours the Nunan drifted helplessly in a blinding snowstorm. Search by the coast guard failed to locate the vessel, but after receiving additional directions by radio the Ossipee made a second try and found the schooner when the weather cleared.

The plight of the unemployed in the bitter weather was tragically revealed when Joseph Masiello, 41, of Cottage street, East Boston, staggered into the East Boston Relief Station and told Dr. Arthur G. Holland that his wife and three children were seriously sick.

FAMILY STRICKEN

An ambulance was sent for the family, who were found to be dangerously ill of pneumonia, and Masiello, suffering from the same disease, was ordered to bed. Later Masiello, his wife, Josephine, 40, and three children, Anthony, 9; Frank, 11, and Mary, 10, were transferred to the City Hospital, where they were found to be in serious condition.

The first skating fatality of the year was reported from Freedom, Maine, where Alvin Flye, 19, broke through thin ice and was drowned. His companion, Ambrose Upham, who also went into the water, succeeded in saving himself.

Unseasonably, firemen were called in Needham to extinguish a grass fire at Chestnut and Temple streets.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 10 (AP)—The fourth day of New York state's cold wave brought reports of temperatures as low as 22 degrees below zero last night. The low temperature was recorded at Owl's Head.

Comedy to Help South Boston Poor

The Sycamore Associates of South Boston will present musical comedy, "Collegiate Gaze," under the direction of Miss Maida Putnam, on December 13 and 14 at Shurtleff school hall, Dorchester avenue.

Proceeds of the affair will be added to a Christmas basket fund for the needy in South Boston.

Joseph Connolly, former all-scholastic football star, and Miss Virginia Waldon will play the leading roles.

Rensselaer Tech President Dead

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 10 (AP)—Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute announced that its president, Dr. Palmer Ricketts, 78, died today in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he recently underwent a major operation.

Dr. Ricketts was born in Elkton, Md., was graduated from R. P. I. in 1875 and became instructor and later professor of mathematics and astronomy. In 1892 he was made director and in 1901 president of the institute.

SPEER DIARY INTRODUCED AT INQUEST

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Northfield, Dec. 10—A .12-gauge shotgun shell was to be placed in evidence today at the secret inquest in the mysterious murder of Dr. Elliot Speer.

The shell, police said, was found in a house on Mt. Hermon school campus. The wadding is of a type identical with that left on the ground outside the window of Dr. Speer's study when a shotgun blast killed the young headmaster on September 14.

Of the 10 witnesses summonsed to appear at the inquest today, the first three were expected to give evidence concerning the possession of a gun that might have been the murder weapon.

GUIDE TO TESTIFY

The inquest today entered its sixth day, making it the longest in 53 years in this state. The initial witness today will be the 35th to take the stand thus far.

Daniel Van Valkenburgh, 75, a blacksmith at Mt. Hermon School, was expected to be one of the first to testify today. He is expected to tell of hunting trips he has taken as a guide, and of the types of weapons used by his companions.

His son, Donald Van Valkenburgh, was at the courthouse ready to give testimony. He is expected to confirm his father's story.

Another witness scheduled to appear today was Lee Howard, son of a former Northfield carpenter, whose testimony was understood to involve a weapon which his father repaired some years ago.

The gun, a .12-guage shotgun, was broken several years ago, and the late carpenter repaired its stock.

STOKES TRACES LETTER

Captain John F. Stokes, chief of state detectives, today was in New York attempting to run down the writer of an anonymous letter received by District Attorney Joseph T. Bartlett.

The letter implied that a suspect in the case had paid $1000 to silence a man who said he was wanted by the state as a witness. In a telephone conversation early today with Bartlett, Stokes reported that the letter appeared to be of little value as a clue, but that he would continue his investigation.

BRITANNIC HERE 24 HOURS LATE

Twenty-four hours late and with her decks a mass of snow and ice, the liner Brittanic, from Liverpool, Queenstown and Galway, arrived at Commonwealth Pier today after battling a terrific blizzard off the Grand Banks.

With Captain Percy R. Vaughan commanding, the ship carried $600,000 worth of gold bars from England, consigned to a New York bank, and 215 passengers, 59 of them disembarking here.

Members of the crew were using live steam through hose lines to rid the decks of ice and snow, when she arrived in Boston.

Although the Cameronia, from Glasgow, was supposed to dock after the Britannic, it skirted the storm center, and was enabled to arrive nearly a day in advance.

50 PUPILS FLEE EVERETT FIRE

While fire blazed from an overheated furnace, 50 children, all about five years old, were marched from two rooms of a portable building today in the rear of the Franklin school, Thorndike street, Everett.

Prompt action by the two teachers, Miss Josephine Reynolds and Miss Catherine Barnes, removed the children from the danger zone before the tots were aware that a fire was burning.

The old-type, hot air furnace is set in a corridor between the two rooms, and is believed to have over-heated, igniting the wood flooring beneath.

Miss Reynolds, seeing smoke curling in under the door of her room from the corridor, investigated and found the blaze. She notified Miss Barnes and the two teachers marched the pre-school children from their respective rooms by exits at the far ends of the portable building.

Woman Invalid Saved in Fire

A bed-ridden woman was rescued by her husband and six others were forced to flee into freezing cold today when fire broke out in a two-family house at Nicholson and Washington streets, Marblehead.

Mrs. Carl Coffin was carried to the home of a neighbor by her husband. Mr. and Mrs. James P. Stone, Charles, 13, and Dorothy, 11, were forced to leave the second floor.

"Champ Dad" Proud Father of 35

Married twice—and now 84 years old—Joseph Sears of Hillside avenue, East Dedham, is the father of 35 sons and daughters, the oldest 60, the youngest 22. He believes he may be America's champion dad. In this exclusive Boston Evening American photograph, Sears is shown with his second wife. She presented him with 17 children. He had 18 by the first Mrs. Sears. Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

CHAMPION DAD 'LOSES' 16

Propped up in bed at his home in Hillside avenue, East Dedham, Joseph Sears, 84, whose 35 offspring acclaim him the champion father, took his title somewhat lightly today.

Of the large group, 18 by his first marriage and 17 by the second, Sears could account for only 19 of his brood. Seven make their home in Dedham; four others live "somewhere around Boston," and eight—to his knowledge—have died.

The remaining 16 are spread throughout the country, many of them not having been heard from in many years.

One of those who still lives in Dedham has the peculiar distinction of being two years older than his stepmother, the second wife of Sears.

Sears has been confined to bed since he suffered a shock last March.

LABOR SCORES ELY'S TROOPS

of the textile strike agreement," the letter read.

"We realize that representations may have been made to you that the presence of the state police serves to maintain public order. If such representations were made we regret that no notice was afforded the citizens affected to present their side of the case before you ordered the state constabulary into action.

"When so many crimes of violence remain unsolved, when highway patrol is so essential for public safety, when a prominent citizen in a fashionable community has to telephone Washington for ordinary police protection to save his daughter from kidnapers, we believe that anyone who diverts normal police functions to assist mill owners in strike breaking is guilty of misuse of his executive authority and neglect of sworn duty.

"Your action is all the more peculiar when one realizes that there exists within the state department of labor and industries a division of conciliation and arbitration which would seem to be the agency to whom a Governor would turn to secure a speedy settlement of industrial disputes.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

"Of course, for such a division to function it is necessary for its officials to have the confidence or at least the tolerance of the two parties involved. Is it because we feel that they are lacking in this essential that you turn instead to the hoofs of police horses to crash a strike?

"May we suggest that if you lack confidence in the labor department officials, whom you yourself selected, you would better serve your oath of office by replacing them with other officials in whom you and the people of this commonwealth can have the needed trust?

"The Massachusetts State Federation of Labor requests you to restore respect in American institutions and in the Massachusetts brand of law and order by calling off the strike breaking troopers."

Governor Ely was absent today from the State House and was reported to be at his home in Westfield.

PLIGHT OF WIDOW, 80, BARED TO BASKET FUND

'JUST GOING TO DRINK WATER 'TIL SHE DIED'

She was weeping — the social worker telephoning about the 80-year-old widow in Roxbury who said that she was going to drink water until she died.

And she isn't a woman who cries easily, either. She spends a great deal of her time helping folks in hard luck. With the tragedies, big and little, of poverty, illness and hunger, she's well acquainted.

She knows that tears fill no empty stomachs; warm no fuelless stoves.

But she couldn't keep the catch out of her voice when she told the Christmas Basket Editor of the Boston Evening American, the pitiful tale of this aged and weary woman in the twilight of life, for whom she was appealing. She said:

"I've just been to see this woman in Roxbury. No relatives or friends. She sits in a rocking chair, near a small stove, in a kitchen barren of furniture.

"Just enough fuel to heat the kitchen during the day. On many occasions she has been without food. She receives $5 per week from the welfare and $2 from our organization. This is spent for rent, food and fuel.

HUNDREDS OF OTHERS

"One night last week a neighbor had to lend her 50 cents so that she could get something to eat. She has given up hope. 'I'm going to drink water, until I die,' she told me."

This visitor wanted the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Editor to do something, and do it soon, about the old woman who was going to drink water until she died.

And, of course, the basket editor will help. But that woman, undernourished and ill-clad, is just one of the many persons needing help this holiday season. There are children, hundreds, maybe thousands, of others in the same plight. And there are grown-ups, too, whose Christmas will be bleak and empty unless Boston Evening American Goodfellows, as they always have, come to the rescue.

Contributions are slow in arriving—the requests, a bigger and sadder heap of mail every morning . . . It depends on YOU, YOU and YOU Goodfellows to bring a little Christmas cheer into these homes. Please do it now. Call the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for the name and address of some needy family, possibly in your own neighborhood, who would welcome your assistance.

WRITE OR CALL

If you wish to send a donation, address your letter to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Editor, 294 Devonshire street. Or if you wish to bring it personally, all well and good.

The Boston Evening American wishes to express its thanks to the employees of Wilson & Company, packers and provisioners in the market district, who sent a $30 check to the fund through George L. Horton, district manager of the firm.

There are a number of other contributors who have sent in donations, but prefer to be known as "Just a Friend."

Have YOU done your part? You would if you read only a part of the heart-rending letters that Uncle Sam continues to pile upon the desk of the basket editor.

CROWDS VIEW MAYFAIR FETE

More than 300 patrons were turned away at the Mayfair last night as entertainers from screen, stage and radio gathered in the Broadway rendezvous to stage a sparkling show, proceeds of which are to be turned over to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

The Mayfair was far too small for the throng, and the doors were closed shortly after the big show started at 9 p. m. Brilliant entertainment continued until midnight and dancing followed until 2 a. m.

Fifty movie stars sent autographed photographs to Benny Ginsberg, chairman of the entertainment committee, and these were auctioned off to the highest bidders, swelling the Basket Fund almost $200.

Among the volunteer entertainers were Lester Allen of Follies, Vanities and Scandals fame; "Peaches" Browning, now at the Gayety; Harry Einstein, who portrays "Nick Parkyakakas" on the radio; Ranny Weeks and his Mayfair band; Sammy Liner and his Mayfair band; Joe Rines, with members of his Cascades floor show; Ann Lester of vaudeville fame; Memi Parks, Buddy Clark, Barbara Belmore, Al Burkinshaw, Jimmy Downey, Joe Rubin, comedian; the Four Snappy Steppers from the Gayety, who came near stealing the show, and others of the stage, currently in Boston.

Only 1500 Deer Shot in State

The Massachusetts deer hunting season closed Saturday with an unusually low recorded number of kills, it was revealed today. Between 1200 and 1500 deer were reported shot in the preliminary figures released by Raymond J. Kenney, director of the state division of fisheries and game.

CHILDREN ASK FOR BARE NECESSITIES IN PLEAS

Here are more appeals received by the Christmas Basket Fund Editor. Every one of these cases has been investigated and found worthy of the help of Goodfellows who wish to see that no one lacks Christmas joy.

CASE 29

Would you please send us a basket. I have six children ages 3, 4, 6, 8, 11 and 13. My husband has been out of work for four years.

We are all badly in need of shoes, clothing and bed clothes.

We had a very poor Thanksgiving. All we had was meat from the welfare and it was barely enough to go round. The children are hungry all the time.

I have to keep two of the children from school, as they have no shoes. I have a pair of shoes that one of my boys found in the dump, but they are all worn out.

I don't know what will become of us this winter unless some kind person helps us out.

Won't you please send us a basket? I don't mind for myself or my husband, it's the children. I would be glad to have anyone investigate my case.

All I can say is God bless you and your good work.

This mother lives in South Boston. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 29.

CASE 30

Would you please, send me a basket? Please send me one this year, if you can.

We are on the welfare for about two years now, so you can see it's not so easy to find a job so we could be able to get what we need (and we need so many things).

There are five of us, husband, three boys, 6, 4, 2 years old, and myself. The oldest goes to school.

We even have no blankets, just coats on top of the one blanket we have. But that isn't what hurts, it's when Christmas is here and nothing to show that it is Christmas.

Please send us one. I wish you'd know what it would mean to us. I think I couldn't bear it. Another Christmas like the last two. Please help us.

This mother lives in South Boston. Anyone wishing to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 30.

CASE 31

My father is dead and we are on the welfare. My mother is sick, she just had an operation at the Massachusetts General Hospital. I am sick with heart trouble.

We get a grocery order and two dollars a week. My mother cannot buy us anything for Christmas and the grocery order is not enough to buy a dinner with. I have a little brother aged seven. We have never asked for a dinner before. We will be happy at Christmas if you remember us.

This little girl lives in Malden. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 31.

CASE 32

I am writing to ask you to try and not forget us this Christmas, as there are 10 children and mother and dad in our family. We need help very much. My mother has been sick for two months and can hardly see. I have to get right close to her. She is having treatments at the City Hospital, and my father has been sick for four years and he is having treatments at the same hospital.

My mother is a young woman to be losing her eyesight.

There is five girls, ages 16, 15, 8, 5, 3, and five boys, ages 14, 13, 12, 10, 1. They're all sizes. They are in need of clothes and anything will be appreciated. We are in need of shoes badly. I know there are lots of other people who are in need of things, too, but we really need things very badly, too. All my mother does is lie in bed and worry.

This girl lives in Dorchester. Anyone wishing to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 32.

CASE 33

I am a man 42 years of age with a wife and three small boys. For the past two years I have been out of work due to sickness.

The little money we get from the welfare just about keeps us alive. Thanksgiving day we had a very poor meal.

We live on the first floor which consists of four rooms. We are able to use only the kitchen and bedroom.

One look at me and my family will soon convince you what poverty and sickness have done for us. What little clothing we have just about covers our bodies. Will you send us a Christmas basket? We will be thankful.

This father lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help him may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor and ask for Case No. 33.

Christmas Toy to Be Ticket to Loew's State Show

Do you want to share your Christmas joy with others?

Of course you do! The Boston Evening American has arranged a special show at Loew's State Theater at which the price of admission will be a toy.

The party itself will be held next Saturday morning promptly at 10 o'clock, with the doors of the State Theater opening a half-hour earlier.

Manager Joseph H. Brennan and the Loew staff have arranged an exceptional program for the occasion. It will be in harmony with the spirit of the season and will be entertaining for adults and children alike. While the individual units of the show have not been definitely decided upon as yet, it is already known that one of the highlights will be a minature musical stage revue under the direction of Mary V. Corbett, noted dancer and producer.

Therefore, scurry over the house. Bring up that doll that was given to you last season, or that little scooter that you've grown tired of and use them as your price of admission.

Remember, the showing is for adults and children. Enter into the spirit of the occasion and you will find that this Christmas will be the happiest of all for you and you and you!

NEW DEAL GETS BUSINESS AID

Washington, Dec. 10—Business moved to fulfill its promises of support to the New Deal as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers launched a gigantic dual offensive to accelerate national recovery.

In the most concerted drive yet undertaken by business and industrial forces, more than 100 leading national figures were called together for December 17, to formulate business' program for its own rehabilitation. The session will be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Meanwhile, the Chamber of Commerce, shot a barbed attack at Public Works Administrator Ickes' proposed government housing program.

The chamber lamented the fact that the PWA program "has proved disappointing in the amount of employment furnished, and urged that the federal government taper off as soon as possible in emergency relief expenditures."

PRESIDENT IN AIR ADDRESS TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

An important address by President Roosevelt is to be in the chilly winds tonight, originating in Washington as the attorney-general's conference on crime takes place. Network facilities of the NBC, the CBS and the ABS will waft his words across the nation between 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

Certain reservations are in evidence in connection with stations slated to carry the Presidential message in these parts. Heretofore, it has been customary and practically a foregone conclusion that every station of the chain systems manage to clear the channels when the Chief Executive speaks. This time, however, the Yankee Network serves patrons through WNAC alone, leaving WAAB to transmit other efforts. Un-

the NBC side of the fence, the WBZ wave is involved, but not that of WEEI, which latter outlet must accommodate two commercial commitments. Then there's the more or less new organization known as the American Broadcasting System, with New England affiliation through Boston's baby broadcasting unit, namely, WMEX. Word from the WMEX office says: "You Bet Your Life we'll have President Roosevelt on our air" and unmistakable pride colors the assurance given. It is expected that President Roosevelt will wholeheartedly back the Department of Justice crusade to wipe out killer-racketeers, as already under way and with the big chief Attorney-General wearing three former "Public Enemy" scalps on his belt.

POPULAR PAIR

Conrad Thibault and Frances Langford have the weekly "House Party" program call tonight, along with Al Goodman's music (WEEI) which is the 9:30 place referred to up front there in this piece for today.

Mother Asks Crib for Baby, Hurt in Fall From Bed

A mother, whose babe has no crib and must sleep in the same bed with her, asks for a crib for the child. The baby recently fell out of bed and was badly hurt, the mother writes. The mother is afraid this accident may be repeated.

A woman out of work complains she has not even the chance of a job because of her appearance. She asks for clothing, size 36 or 38 and for shoes, size 4½.

The mother of five girls asks for dresses and coats, size 12, 10, 8, 6, and 2. The husband is ill in the hospital.

A mother who does not want to distribute her child's faith in Santa Claus asks for a sidewalk bicycle or tricycle.

A hard working young man, who can just about support himself, writes in asking for an overcoat for an unfortunate friend who has been out of employment for years. The size is 38.

Please write all communications legibly and do NOT bring articles into the office of the Boston Evening American.

Lost Porter Sought

A statewide search was in progress today for Daniel J. Finn, 40, of Shawmut avenue, South End, a porter at City Hospital, who disappeared from his home November 19.

NIGHT LIGHTS and SIGHTS by Manny Sherman

Well, boys and girls, the stars didn't fall on Alabama last Thursday night, they fell in meteors and motors into the Salle Moderne of Hotel Statler, when Joe Relchman brought his famous band to this popular rendezvous, after a successful engagement at Hotel New Yorker. And boy, OH boy, what a band this Reichman has . . . and what a master of the rippling ivories Reichman is!

Joe Reichman himself. No wonder they put an illuminatel mirror above his keyboard and flying fingers. Glancing around was fun, for the place was sparkling with celebrities . . . Guy Lombardo, who needs no introduction to any audience; Carmen Lombardo with a beautious blondekina, an ex-Follette, I heard . . . Sammy Liner, Mayfair's clever band boss and even the more or less rotund Jacques Renard of Cocoanut Grove cutting capers on the dance floor, not forgetting the American's own radio scribe (and an acel) "N. F. T." Here was a send-off that will show Joe what Boston's spirit of welcome is like.

Doff your derby to the Brown Derby . . . they know a master emcee when they see him, so that's why Lou Ashe is on the job at this favorite gay spot . . . and doing an all around job that rates the book of the month award.

Lerman C. Prior, one of the real deans of Boston hotel life, is now devoting his entire time to management of Hotel Lenox, having a heavy financial slice in this hostelry. Yes, you guessed it, the Lenox is going to get some innovations, a new bar and all that part of 'thing. Arthur L. Norton, '27 Harvard grad, takes over Mr. Prior's job at the Brunswick. The famous Casino will be his former love.

Gaze at the smiling countenance of Jewel Ray, as nice to hear as to look at. And when I say hear I mean hear the dulcet tones, lured from the $10,000 Maggini violin which she plays with John Ray, accordion artiste par excellence, in the Hotel Bradford Grill. You don't expect, and seldom hear, music like this due rendering in a grill, but it's there, so why not drop in and hear it. You know, naturally, that the Cascades is still luring them in droves.

Jewel Ray

The Wardman and Somerset are now under the Abbott Hotels management with Karl P. Abbott, succeeding his father, one of the real veterans of hotel men in America. Mr. Abbott (Jr.) is young in years, but has a wealth of experience. He has appointed J. Edward Downes as supervising manager of the Abbott Hotels in Boston. It's good to hear that business in these inns is 100 per cent better than last year.

In spite of rumors, exclusive (?) and otherwise, the fact remains that Payson Reye and his grand band, will stay on at Club Charmain with the popular Don Howard as master of cermonies. Payson really had booked elsewhere, but rumors and the insistance of patrons, who sure do go for his sweet rhythm.

It's true that many streets of Boston at night sound like HONK Kong . . . so Arthur Race of the Copley-Plaza is all work on an "anti-noise" campaign, to reduce the clamor of honking horns, Shhhh . . . we're for it!

Maceo Resnick who can sell a suit right on your back in fitting time, is one of the committee in charge of the reunion of English High School, Class of '27, which gets together tomorrow night at Cocoanut Grove.

Far be it from modest Manny to try and compete with the word painters who write the news stories. So just let me say that all that they have said about the very, very grand and good-natured night club artists, who entertained at the Mayfair last night for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, is true. And in the name of sweet charity (as usual) the show folks went to town. "American" has reason to them all.

Here's an odd bit. Scott and Douglas, the dance team, clap-handing them at the American House Bathskeller, played in the Cafe Diangle, a French spot in London, and in the Ambassador, an English and American restaurant in Paris. Which proves something or other, which really doesn't matter, because they're good.

Well, sir, my good friend Art Spalding (you know Art if you're a Bostonian) is out in the spotlight at Hotel Essex. It's nice to see Boston boys get the breaks, and Art sure knows how to entertain.

Hotel Puritan is getting things lined up for the holidays at the Old Boston room where Ruby Newman's band delights the toe-trippers who are foot-wise.

Steuben-dous . . . that's the way Boston folks rate the floor shows and so forth at Steuben's Bathskeller, where Jack Fisher is still musicialling the crowds.

Winton Bee brought them back to the Lido because they were good . . . the Lido girls, who have been in New York doing a turn. I like Sherry Clarke's acrobatic dancing. Watch her and try it on your living room floor some evening.

Wingy wangy until next week.

Name Your Don Juan

Which Wins-Chivalry or Brains?

DOUG FAIRBANKS ' MERLE OBERON

The art of chivalrous love-making finds Douglas Fairbanks at his best in "The Private Life of Don Juan," opening Thursday at Loew's State Theater. Here he is with Merle Oberon.

What does the modern girl desire most in her preferred man?

Is she any different from the prim beauties of other days?

Douglas Fairbanks, star of "The Private Life of Don Juan," portraying one of history's most famous and successful lovers, had reason to give the subject considerable thought incident to making this new picture which begins a week's engagement at Loew's State Theater next Thursday, together with a second feature, "Men of the Night."

Based on his study of "Don Juan," Fairbanks reveals the following. Do you agree or disagree with him?

Chivalry, Fairbanks agrees, is as important now in a man as it ever was. Then come good looks, ability to wear clothes, financial standing, character, figure, athletic prowess and lastly—yes lastly, brains.

The Boston Evening American, in conjunction with Loew's State theater, offers $25 in cash prizes and 25 theater guest tickets to those women and young men who present the most interesting chart of romantic values. Remember, too, that you are writing it from the lady's viewpoint. List the eight traits chosen by Fairbanks in their order of importance as you see them. Give each a percentage value so that all total 100 per cent. Tell briefly, 50 words or less, why you have made your selections.

Prizes will be apportioned as follows: First, $5.00; second and third, $2.50; the next 15 $1.00 each, and the following 25 guest tickets to Loew's State. Address all mail to Don Juan Contest Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. The contest will close Thursday, and all replies must be in by Friday at midnight, to be eligible. Employes of this newspaper and Loew's Theater not eligible to compete.

By George Holland

A quorum of the famous Theater Guild is in Boston now, busy with the world premiere to-night of "Rain from Heaven," at the Plymouth. Therefore, if this be wrong, there will come a quick correction. (Last night, dress rehearsal night, was not the time to check a news item.) But the story goes that for the first time in the Guild's long and prosperous existence, the name of a player will be placed above the name of a Guild play. It will be Elizabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never," and not "Escape Me Never," with Elizabeth Bergner. That, in the theater, is the distinction between starring and featuring a player.

Elizabeth Bergner

More in a twitting than a carping humor, this side-liner has commented on the Theater Guild's volley in sub-featuring Helen Hayes, for instance, to the title "Mary of Scotland," and of placing the name of "Ah, Wilderness" over those of Eugene O'Neill and George M. Cohan. Then there was "Biography," by the same Mr. Behrman who is the author of "Rain from Heaven"), with Ina Claire. That the Guild played no favorites is granted because there were also Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine and Philip Merivale and Jane Cowl.

The story behind the decision to star Miss Bergner, the English actress, would be interesting, if true. And I'm almost sure it's true. Elizabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never" or vice-versa, with the original English supporting company, will be presented in America next month.

Christmas notes: Nora Ford, headlining at the Park Theater, will be the star, with Joe Watson and Willie Cohan, fellow Minsky entertainers, also present at a buffet supper and stage show at the Po'cole headquarters, Hotel Bradford, of the Crescup Pishon Post of the American Legion. The post's Christmas drive is on . . . Benny Gaines' generous donation of the Mayfair as the scene last night of a huge show in furtherance of the Boston Basket Fund met this response: The room was sold out at 9 o'clock . . . Max Nichols of the Park Theater will give his theater and performance on December 21 to the cause of providing shoes for hundreds of children.

NINO MARTINI, OPERA AND RADIO STAR, TO STAR IN MUSICAL FILM SERIES

Lionel Barrymore Gets Cohan Role in Screen Version of "Ah, Wilderness!"

Los Angeles, Dec. 10—They're all going operatic! I mean the producers. Now comes Jesse Lasky to tell me that he has just signed Nino Martini, grand opera and radio star.

Martini, who has a god-given voice, was the leading tenor in 1932 in the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company and for the past two seasons he has been with the Metropolitan and his radio engagement. He will be starred in a series of romantic musicals to be produced by Mr. Lasky for Fox. Although he is only 29 years old, Martini has been hailed by music critics as the greatest tenor since Caruso.

Just about every famous character actor in Hollywood has been mentioned for the lead in "Ah Wilderness!" Now my friends, it has simmered down to Lionel Barrymore and he and not Will Rogers, nor Wm. C. Fields or anybody else will have the lead in the famous Eugene O'Neill play. Directing Lionel will be Clarence Brown, who has just signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

England offered Bing Crosby an unbelievable sum to come over there and make a picture, but Bing refused and you will never guess the reason. Someone told him that they dress up in London and he says he wouldn't swap the old felt hat and sweater for spats and a top hat for a king's ransom.

Chatter in Hollywood

Abram Chasins, the musician and poet, named by John Cecil Lawrence in his divorce against Elissa Landi, will fight. Chasins has engaged one of New York's largest legal firms and will either send one of their lawyers or will go himself personally to London to defend Miss Landi's fair name. Roger Marcheti, meanwhile, who is representing Miss Landi in Hollywood, will use Lawrence's allegations as the basis for his cruelty suit.

Switzerland has never had a navy, but neither has it ever had a motion picture star. Samuel Goldwyn is going to remedy the movie situation, even though our Swiss friends may never have ambitions to rule the waves. Sam has signed Hedi Shope of Zurich for a role opposite Anna Sten and Gary Cooper in "The Wedding Night." Miss Shope, in private life, is Mrs. Frederick Hollander, the wife of the producer who made the Tingel Tangel Theater so famous in Hollywood, and Miss Shope will sing in the picture.

Dorothy Maye Stars in 'Speed Girls' on Howard Stage

Dorothy Maye is the star of the "Speed Girls," which takes over the burlesque spotlight at the Old Howard tonight. Miss Maye is acclaimed as the most beautiful star on the independent Circuit, and with her are billed Vic Plant, John Grant and Frank Smith, as a trio of favorite comics.

Babe Abbott, Jean Rose and Rae Russell are other well known Dorothy Maye "Speed Girls," which has a chorus line of two dozen famous beauties. Vaudeville acts complete the footlight presentation, and on the screen the feature attraction is "Upper World," with Warren William, Mary Astor and young Dickie Moore as leading players. On the same program is "The Crime of Helen Stanley," with Ralph Bellamy and Shirley Grey.

There will be another midnight show on Friday with special attractions added to the regular program.

"Peaches" Is Gayety Star

"Peaches" Browning, widow of the late "Daddy" Browning, headlines the new stage bill at the Gayety Theater which will be held over for the entire week. The appearance is a farewell stage tour for the comely performer, who will retire from professional life before the first of the year.

On the screen George Arliss stars in "The Last Gentleman," with Ralph Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Janet Beecher, Charlotte Henry and Donald Meek. On the same program is "Night of the Woman," with Arline Judge, Rita LeRoy and Dick Cromwell heading the cast.

Joint Recital

Elizabeth Cushman, soprano, and Rafael Mertis, pianist, will be heard in a joint recital at Jordan Hall this evening at 8:30. Miss Cushman will sing songs from Jozart, von Bluck, Strauss, Wolff, Reger, Mertis, Debussy, Faure Borodin and Chausson, and as assisting artist Mr. Mertis will play the B minor Sonata by Liszt.

Nora Ford Top New Program at Park

"Fads and Fashions," another of the new and smart Minsky burlesque offerings, comes to the Park today, with Nora Ford, a big Boston favorite, topping the cast. Joan Barlow, Edna Mae, Louise Phelps, Mae Dix and La Carman, talented dance star, are other beauties in the big cast, and the fun-makers are headed by Joseph K. Watson, Willie Cohen and Billy Arlington.

Seats for the evening performances at the Park are reserved, and there will be a midnight show with special attractions on Friday.

Manager Max Michaels will step into the role of Santa Claus at another big midnight bill on December 21, when the entire profits will be used to provide hundreds of pairs of shoes for needy boys and girls. Reserved seats for this special performance are on sale at the box office, and in addition to the current burlesque bill, volunteer stars from Boston's leading theaters, vaudeville houses, night clubs and radio stations will take part in the celebration.

Lawrence Tibbett Triumphs in Symphony Hall Concert

By JOYCE DANA

That the concert stage can share the glories of opera, the movies and the radio, perhaps only Lawrence Tibbett could prove. America's greatest baritone, the one upon whom the superlative can be bestowed without dissenting whisper, sang to a crowded house yesterday afternoon for his only Boston recital of the season.

The glamour of the Metropolitan, the lavish settings of million dollar movie productions, have many times now provided his background. Yet the charm and intimacy of the concert hall become him equally. An enraptured audience clamored for more long after the concert hour, calling out its approval, insisting upon favorites which the movies and the radio have made beloved and familiar.

Lawrence Tibbett

HIS OPENING GROUP

The opening group of songs yesterday was in quieter and more sombre mood. "The Secret Departure," an old Breton song arranged by Deems Taylor; "There is a Lodge," by Winifred Burr, and "There's Not a Swain on the Plain," by Purcell-Moffatt.

In them, with simple melodic line, faultless diction and admirable restraint, there was no dependence upon dramatic values, not even a stress upon the almost miraculous range of tone which Mr. Tibbett commands. Likewise with the lovely Brahms "O Tis a Lay a Child Once More," and "Love Song," and Hugo Wolf's "Fare Thee Well," there was a simplicity and unaffectedness. Schubert's impressive "The Omnipotence," concluded the group, and then turning to Moussorsky, the artist sang in English (which he used throughout the entire program) the stirring and tragic Monologue from "Boris Godunoff."

Having set the pace for opera, an excerpt from Emperor Jones, built around the spiritual "It's Me, Oh, Lord, Standing In the Need of Prayer," provided an encore. Of the final group, a new song by Charles Ridgway, aptly titled, "Traffic," and calling for an informal introductory comment by Mr. Tibbett, had the haste and hurry, the "Stop" and "Go" of this modern machine age. And to the vast delight of everybody, undoubtedly including himself, the encore was an altogether inspired, and musically charming "American Lullaby," by Gladys Rich, with its captivating story based upon daddy's keeping the wolf from the door in a stock-broker's office, and mother rushing off to bring baby home the bridge prize.

"Shortnin' Bread," to uproarious approval, "The Song of the Flea," "De Glory Road," were among the generous number of encores, with the striking "Death's Lullaby" a dialogue between Death and the mother of a sick child, and the merry Buzzi-Peccia "Come Buy," from Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" the final numbers on the published program.

A NATURAL VOICE

It is not great radio networks nor the popular appeal of the movies, nor even his colorful operatic achievements that have won for Mr. Tibbett his place in the musical world. For there is first of all a gloriously natural voice. Always there is the inescapable conviction that he sings because he loves to sing. There is the disarming and unostentatious personality, a warmth and friendliness, which added to the superb equipment and training and hard work that are the requisites of musical success, all conspire to make him the finest artist of America's musical world today.

As always, Stewart Wills provided the exceptionally skilled accompaniments, and for his further share in the program played the Hess arrangement of a Bach chorale, and the Bach-Siloti Organ Prelude in G minor.

By Betty Alden

WITH THE MERCURY hovering uncomfortably close to zero, our imaginations begin to soar to the tropical gardens, warm sparkling oceans and soft sands of fashion's winter playgrounds so boldly depicted in travel catalogues...for all those who cannot make these dreams a reality we recommend the Wellesley girls' barricade against frostbitten ears and toes, vivid plaid earlaps clamped tightly over bare heads and matching anklets worn without stockings!...

ROSAMUND MUSGRAVE

About one hundred of Boston society's most discriminatingly dressed ladies, to whom a winter vacation after Christmas is not just a dream but a happy possibility, have been invited to a luncheon and pre-vue of a choice selection of clothes which before long will find their way into many a southern bound suitcase...Mrs. Harold Everett Porter, with her usual graciousness, will entertain this company at luncheon in her Model Apartment in the Hotel Vendome on Friday, December 14, assisted by a group of the season's debutantes and a few post debs...Miss Mary and Miss Lydia Fuller will be in this group, as will Miss Margaret Burnett, Miss Ellen Bottomley, Miss Margaret Emerson, Miss Rosamund Musgrave, Miss Lansdale Watson (it is certain that "Lindy" will be headed South soon), Mrs. Francis Howe Gleason, Miss Frances McElwain, Miss Katherine Johnson, Mrs. George U. Bayliss, Miss Claire Moran, Miss Kathleen Moran, Miss Jean Porter, the hostess's daughter, Miss Mary Curley, Miss Martha Chapin and Miss Margretta Erickson...

Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, Mrs. John Bottomley, Mrs. Adolf Leeds and Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield will pour at this event.

Among the many guests who will be in this pleasant gathering will be the ten women recently selected as the most chic of our community, and also Mrs. Henry Bunce, Mrs. W. China 2d in B. U. List of Graduates

Canada has 85 Boston University alumni, and China, thousands of miles away, with 75, is second in the list of graduates who live in foreign countries, the university alumni office revealed today. Japan is third with 54 graduates, Puerto Rico, fourth, with 28.

Asia leads Europe three to one in B. U. graduates, while South America is third, and Australia fourth. Among the countries in which graduates are to be found are Trinidad, Samoa and Palestine.

New Art Exhibit Opens at Junior League; Tea is Planned

Beginning today, Boston has its first showing of the works of Nura (Mrs. Edward B. Uhrich) at the Junior League headquarters. This well known artist specializes particularly in worthwhile juvenile art and literature, and has been most popular in New York, as her drawings, paintings and sculptures show a very subtle understanding of the child.

The book "Stories"—which has in it ten blank pages opposite the illustrations on which the young owner may write his own story—and the "Butterfly Tree" are done with most delicate handling.

Included in the Junior League show are copies of these two books in addition to her other works, which will be open to the public through December 22.

The Angna Enters show, which closes today, has attracted numerous enthusiastic visitors, many of whom attended her dance recitals at the Repertory Theater. Among the holiday visitors noticed in the gallery were Miss Elizabeth Saltonstall, Mrs. William H. Goodwin, Miss Suzanne Crocker, Mrs. William C. MEN SHOULD BRUSH UP ON ART OF GIVING FRIVOLOUS THINGS THIS YEAR

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

Lee Chow intimates to Madge that harm may come to Dicky or her children if she persists in refusing to listen to his story.

CHAPTER 213

AS LEE CHOW finished his deliberate little pronouncement—for he had uttered each word slowly and with meaning emphasis—I felt as if the autumn breeze outside had suddenly changed to a driving storm of sleet, chilling me down to the very marrow of my bones.

For there was menace in the veiled warning he had just given me. I was sure of that. It was no figment of my imagination this time. I had known Lee Chow a long time, and never before had he stepped outside his orbit of intimate of Hugh Grantland and friend of the rest of us. I had not believed it to be in him to meddle in other people's affairs, or to speak of my relations with my husband with such crassness.

What had he said upon my indignant refusal to continue the conversation along those lines any longer? That he believed he could show me reasons why it would be to my interest, and to my husband's, for me to continue the discussion with him. It was not so much what he had said, as "the nasaty way he said it," that had sent a little chill of terror down my spine, but my temper and spirit were up, and I spoke even more emphatically than before.

"There is nothing in the world you can show me which will make me alter my decision," I said with frigid finality.

THE THREAT

"You are a very rash woman, Mrs. Graham," he said at last. "It is never wise to refuse any information that is offered you. How do you know how can you know—that the safety of your husband, his very life, may not depend upon your listening to me? Or perhaps, the safety of your children?"

He had pierced my defenses at last. I must know what he meant by that last covert threat. Yet he had put the query in so general a fashion that I really had no grounds for claiming that he had threatened me in any way. But my manner was not nearly so truculent as I put a question which seemed to tear my throat as I uttered it.

"Do you mean," I asked, "that the safety of my husband and my children lie in your hands and that if I refuse to listen to you, any protection which you may have given them will be withdrawn?"

"My dear lady!" he said. "Have I said anything like that, or even intimated it? I have told you that I had information of importance to give you. You refused absolutely to listen to me. I then told you that you were a very rash woman, and that it is never wise to refuse proffered information. That last aphorism is a very old one, by the way."

HYPNOTIC EYES

"Then," he went on, "I put a purely academic question to you, asking how you knew that such and such things might not depend upon your decision. There was no personal application, I assure you."

His voice was hypnotic, his unwinking eyes more so. Imperceptibly I began to wonder how it was that I had been so truculent concerning this information he wished to give me.

After all, he had proved his friendship for Dicky and me in many ways. I remembered the time he had trailed Grace Draper to the room where she had lived in disguise and concocted so fiendish a plot against me that, even yet, I awaken from nightmares of it. He had solved that mystery, proved my innocence of the plot against Dicky's life, where the fiendish ingenuity of Grace Draper had made me appear guilty, and had pressed the half-crazed woman to desperation, suicide—and perpetual release for me and mine from her menace.

He probably meant me well, I told myself, with a feeling of dreamy exhaustion. I could do no harm to listen to him for a few minutes. I could always stop the conversation when I wished.

A TIMELY INTERRUPTION

"I am sorry," I said docilely. "I did not mean to accuse you of anything so vile."

He bent toward me slightly, and I felt queerly as if his eyes were growing larger.

"Do not think of it again," he said. "Only one thing matters. Are you ready to listen to me?"

His eyes seemed to come floating toward me, then to recede. But I had a feeling that I could not get away from them, and also the curious conviction that I must answer in the affirmative the question he had just put to me.

"Yes, yes," I breathed. "I will listen." And then my father's voice, calm and casual, sounded from the hall.

"Margaret, may I disturb you for a minute? I need your help."

Autographing Photos

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct way to autograph a photograph I am going to give to my sweetheart?

Why not autograph the photograph simply, "To John, from Dorothy," and then he can read into the handwriting and the Dorothy whatever he wishes to at the moment? Unautographed photographs are considered by many people (including me) more intimate and personal than autographed ones. Next best to the unautographed ones are, I think, the autographs that include th names only.

Slim Coats for Little Women

By Prunella Wood

THE DE LUXE COAT for the little woman who (whisper it gently) has put on a few extra pounds is not hard to find, if you get to an interested specialist. But that's a big "if." Here are some of the points which that specialist would explain to you: Avoid a great concentration of furs piled high between the shoulders and the chin. In other words, see that the fur line tapers in a V at the front, or drops off the shoulders in a downward slopping curve (see the center sketch).

If your arms are a bit too large above the elbow, don't choose a model which strains the cloth over them, but one which has a loose sleeve, broken up by dressmaker details below the elbow, so that there is harmony in the whole arm's length.

A cape, trimmed with Persian lamb, which is too brief to make the figure top-heavy, is the flattering feature of the diagonal broadcloth coat, center.

The notch and the long V line to the waist of the silver fox collar on the black broadcloth coat above are height-giving details.

Note the slim skirt and the restrained use of fur and sleeve detail which makes the coat directly above such a break for the short, plump woman.

Model is diagonal wool with mink collar.

Boy's Party Clothes

Little boys are limited to a more or less uniform costume of brief shorts and white blouses, with either an Eton jacket or a pull-on sweater.

Chapped Lip Lotion

Question: My lips get terribly chapped and cracked in cold weather. While I try to avoid biting them, I nevertheless seem to have acquired the habit. Will an application of cold cream before retiring help them?

Hot Salmon Pie for Variety

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

THE QUESTION "what would we do without fish in the diet?" is something like the one "what would we do without variety in the diet?" We might not starve entirely, but fish is a very fine source of protein and should be substituted for meat on other days than Friday.

Salmon, besides being a body builder, has a high fat content which makes it a very good source of energy. It contains abundant amounts of calcium, phosphorus and iron as well as some of the important vitamins. Besides being a most nutritious food, it is one of the cheapest and during these days of high living it is a very good suggestion for the family dinner. The salmon used at this time of year comes in tins, and here are some suggestions for fixing it up most attractively.

SALMON PIE

1 1-3 cups (1 No. 1 can) salmon.
2 cups thick white sauce
1 cup peas (cooked)
2 cups mashed potatoes.
1 tablespoon butter.

Pick and flake salmon and add to hot white sauce and drained peas. Place in baking dish and top with mashed potatoes. Dot with butter and brown in hot oven, 400 deg, for about 15 minutes. Serves six.

STUFFED TOMATOES, SUPERB

6 medium tomatoes
1 cup salmon
½ cup sliced stuffed olives
1 cup finely shredded cabbage
2 hard-cooked eggs
Lettuce
½ cup mayonnaise

Scoop out tomatoes. Flake salmon and toss together with olives, cabbage and chopped hard-cooked eggs. Fill tomatoes. Place on lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise. Serves six.

SALMON CAKES WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 1-3 cups (1 No. 1 can) salmon.
¼ cup cracker crumbs.
2 eggs.
½ teaspoon salt.
Few grains pepper.
2 tablespoons fat.
½ pound mushrooms.
2 cups medium white sauce.
3 tablespoons pimiento.

Flake and bone salmon. Mix with cracker crumbs, eggs and seasoning. Form into cakes and brown in pan. Melt fat and peeled mushrooms and brown delicately. Add to white sauce with pimiento strips and serve hot over salmon cakes. Serves six.

SALMON LOAF

1 1-3 cups (1 No. 1 can) salmon.
1½ cups soft bread crumbs.
2 hard cooked eggs.
1 cup thick white sauce.

Bone and flake salmon. Mix with bread crumbs, chopped egg and thick white sauce. Place in buttered loaf pan and bake for 30 minutes in a 375 deg. oven. Serve with Sauce Piquant. Serves six.

SALMON A LA NEWBURG

1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
½ teaspoon salt
1 1-3 cups (1 No. 1 can) salmon
2 egg yolks

Melt butter and blend with flour. Gradually add diluted evaporated milk, or fresh milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Add seasoning and salmon which has been boned and flaked. Add egg yolks and cook three minutes longer. Serve in pattie shells or on toast. Serves four.

Afternoon Frock for Holidays

By MARIAN MARTIN

With bridge parties, teas and luncheon dates coming fast and furiously upon us, now that the winter season is really here, what woman's wardrobe hasn't a weak spot which could be well filled by an afternoon frock similar to the one illustrated? Youthfully styled, and just as suitable for the young matron as for the business or college girl, this dress points with pride to such niceties as its prettily molded bodice and paneled skirt—its raglan sleeves which end in importantly tabbed and buttoned cuffs—and its very chic scarf collar, which slips through buttoned-down tabs to tie into a soft bow for a bit of flattery about the neck.

Pattern 9149 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 39-inch fabric and ⅞ yard contrasting.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Send your order to Boston Evening American, Pattern Department, 232 West 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Cocktail Costume

THE COCKTAIL hour is something of a gala occasion these days, with clothes growing more formal and impressive by the minute. A pretty grand cocktail costume, within the reach of even a meagre budget, is a black velvet dress with shirred, elbow length sleeves, and a smart finger-tip length coat of chinchillettes. Black velvet is ingeniously twisted into a young off-the-face hat, and black sandals have inserts of blurry black and white printed kid that match the gray and black markings of the fur coat.

Foolhardy Bids Often Sound

By Josephine Culbertson

A good aggressive player when playing opposite a weak and conservative partner quite often feels compelled to gamble. This is frequently necessary because the partner cannot be relied upon to take the necessary action. In addition, quite frequently enough inferences can be obtained to make a seemingly foolhardy bid almost sound.

On the hand below, the South player jumped all the way from two-odd of one suit to six-odd in another, even though the second suit had not been supported. South's bid was right in one respect—he reached a contract which would usually make with a good division. Unfortunately for South, the trumps did not break, and West's very sound defense set the contract.

West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠108 ♡743 ◇AKQ8654 ♣7
♠K7 ♡A965 ◇— ♣QJ10965♦	North West East South	♠9543 ♡8 ◇1072 ♣AK832
	♠AQ162 ♡KQ102 ◇J93 ♣—

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♣	2◇ (1)	3♣	6◇ (2)
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) I do not know exactly what North meant by this two-diamond bid. If North wished to pre-empt he should have bid three diamonds.

(2) South was on the spot for a variety of reasons: Without knowing what his partner's two-diamond bid signified, he did know that his partner was a conservative bidder and could not be depended upon to keep the bidding open, and also, since West's bid seemed to be based largely on distribution and since East had given a free raise, that North's holding could not include any strength in clubs. Because of his partner's tendency to pass prematurely, he feared he would not be allowed to show both his suits and get an intelligent choice between them; and because of the danger of an opening spade lead through the Ace-Queen and of his partner's losing a trick or two as declarer by poor play, he did not dare to bid a Slam in diamonds. He finally chose to bid six hearts rather than six spades because the hand was played at Duplicate and the honors might make the difference between a top and a bottom.

West opened the club Queen, and when this card held, continued with another club. South was forced to trump and now led out his King of hearts. West quite properly did not win with the Ace, and when the Queen was continued, West again stayed off. South was now helpless. He could not lead still another heart as this would enable West to win with the Ace and lead another club, removing his last trump. Actually, South now abandoned trumps and tried to play for the smallest possible set by shifting to diamonds. West did not trump in until the third round and then laid down the Ace of hearts and exited by playing a club. He subsequently got in with the King of spades and cashed another club trick. Thus the contract, which would have been a laydown had the trumps been divided 3-2, was defeated by several tricks.

Had the declarer continued with trumps he of course would have gone down many more.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell the decay on our breath and say we have bad breath. We feel the decay and have gloomy thoughts and no good reason.

What causes this food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much our digestive juices can't digest it. It is the most common cause of bad body odors. Instead of being digested, our food decays in our bowels every day. Its movements are fast and constipated. All of our food decays in our feet of bowels. This decay poisons us and our body gives us warning.

When our breath smells bad we feel like a whipped mongrel. Don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which really start the flow of your bile. But if something better is offered, don't buy it, for it may be a cathartic pill which worsens teeth and breath and is the reason so many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—Gold. ©1934, C.M.Co

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

This Is Life

by ROBERT E. ROGERS

Well, the Rogers family—in common with the entire population of Cambridge—has been pleased as the grand new gates of Lexington, who gave the order.

Monday morning, when I awoke dreary time, with all the symptoms had to drag myself out to work nothing happening on the dial. After the experience, I can tell you that there was some in cerebral convulsions that the clock that do the housework just had three all down and dead on the job.

It is with mixed feelings that one accustomed duties of the day to the new system. A favorite source of inspiration is gone that of trying to find out who invented ator should tell you that there is no one on the new exchange, pub-lishes when you have logged it to the inch as fast as human lens can type in something like 20 seconds flat.

That little vexation occurred to our household so often, and I had to complain so often, that I began to think I was being made the special goat of the operators' union.

One could under the old dispensation, at least remonstrate briskly with the operator and receive her stereotyped response.

Nowadays there's no use remonstrating with a mess of automatic tin cans and life is too short to call up the solitary operator and get referred to the third vice president in charge of personnel.

Misses Old Names

There are other things I miss—those bashful and accustomed names, ADAMS and DORR, which I have lived with since I was a youngish boy. I regret the passing of University because it symbolizes to me only thing that makes Cambridge a more civilized place than other suburbs not to be named, and I regret DORR because of the beautiful tradition of the porterhouse steak which it symbolizes.

KIRKland and ELIot were college presidents and so worthy of commemoration, but TROWbridge means nothing to me except that the High and Latin schools, in the days before they became an educational Siamese twin, were located there.

And I haven't yet learned my new number. That will probably take me about six months, which time I do learn it, the N E T and T, will heartily wish it had left me with my old familiar and long hallowed by tradition and overdue bills.

I cannot think with equanimity of the presumably large numbers of young and older women whom the perfecting of the mechanical tin cans have probably turned out into the cold world to obtain—if they can—new and strange jobs.

At Robot's Mercy

Indeed, when one considers the excellence of the phone service as operated by living human beings with trained voices, sometimes singularly soft and sweet (and sometimes not), which testified that here was a human brain at work and a human soul in communication—one wonders why, after all, we needed the clicking contraption that takes away people's jobs and seems so far not to give any better service than we had before.

Furthermore, I wonder what about how many awful human occasions when the quick ear of the operator has heard, from a misplaced receiver, the cries of a human being sick or in an accident or deadly peril, or even the crash of glass or the roar of flames or the sound of a shot.

I suppose the inventor has supplied some kind of a substitute but it will be a belated one and there are occasions when time is more than money, when time is human life itself.

And what will the detective story writers do without an alert phone operator to trace the call and gently but shrewd information (strictly against orders) about what went on over the line? Have the tin cans ears and a memory—or are we forever at the mercy of robots?

Those strange and wise inhabitants of "Erewhon", of whom Samuel Butler wrote foreseeing that man was about to become the slave of the machine, proscribed all machinery and made its possession even of a ticking watch the most serious of offences.

One of these days machinery will not be allowed to displace human beings nor efficiency to make us all impersonal and inhuman. In that day will the hello girls come back to us.

General Charles H. Cole was in New Jersey today attending a meeting of state racing commissions on uniform rules.

Three amendments to the dog racing law were filed today for the consideration of the incoming legislature by Representative-elect Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester.

Under the law, dog track owners are allowed 15 per cent of the receipts. Of this amount they are required to turn over to the State 3½ per cent. Coyne would reduce the amount to 10 per cent with the track owners receiving 10 per cent instead of 11½ per cent after paying 3½ per cent to the State. Coyne expressed the belief that the track owners are being provided for too liberally.

The second amendment would prohibit dog racing indoors, and the third would limit the number of dog racing nights to 100 instead of 200, with each of the four tracks permitted 25 racing nights.

Application for a charter for the operation of a horse and dog racing track, or both, was received today by Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long from the Commonwealth Racing Association.

The incorporators of this association are Frank Sawyer of 10 Gainsboro street, Boston, Colyar D. Tyson, 40 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, Leroy P. Gould, 63 Western avenue, Framingham.

Fight to Revive Newton Man Fails

Artificial respiration proved fruitless when Newton firemen tried for half an hour to revive Samuel F. Nesbit, 46, of Albemarle road, West Newton, after his wife had found him slumped on the floor of the garage, the doors shut and the motor of the car running.

He had gone to the garage to fix the gas line of his car. Mrs. Nesbit called firemen and Dr. C. M. Brady, Medical Examiner Thomas M. Gallagher said death was due to accidental carbon monoxide poisoning.

110,000 CCC Men Get Other Jobs

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Civilian Conservation Corps said today more than 110,000 of its former members had obtained outside employment up to October 1.

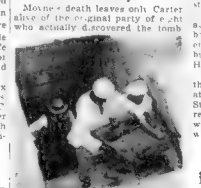
Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, did not say what progress toward economic recovery this indicated. He did say it was "noteworthy" that virtually all the 110,000 jobs were in private industry.

Curse of Tut's Tomb! 7th Man Dies

ONE MAN ALIVE NOW—OF GRAVE OPENERS

London, Dec. 10—Harold Moyne, 48, a Fleet street journalist who was a special correspondent with Howard Carter's expedition to Egypt in 1924 and witnessed the opening of King Tutenkhamen's tomb, was found dead in his bed here in mysterious circumstances. An inquest will be held today.

Moyne's death leaves only Carter alive of the original party of eight who actually discovered the tomb.



Door to King Tut's Tomb

Two others, Dr. Wiegall and Professor Lythgoe, died this year.

Moyne never commented regarding his belief in the legendary curse inscribed on the golden coffin of the long-dead king, which said:

"Death shall come with swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of Pharoah."

Six poker players in Cambridge lost all their cash but didn't lose their shirts—they relinquished their pants instead.

The sextet was deeply engrossed in the game. Hard cash, amounting to $73, littered the table.

Suddenly three gunmen burst in on them, took their cash. The pants were added to the loot to discourage pursuit.

$5000 A Year Man Who Weds Girl to Get 'Paid'

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 10—To Miss Justine C. Perot, the $5000-a-year income awaiting the man she marries is a matter of considerable importance.

She foresees a flood of proposals from cranks and even enough threats as a result of the suit she has brought against Miss Perot's father, Henri Perot, to force her husband to pass on Miss Perot's marriage $5000 a year income to her husband as well as her and the said daughter are using it together in the marriage relationship.

The mother, Mrs. Eleanor Du Pont Perot, member of the prominent Du Pont family, prepared the will a month before she died. The document was filed for probate Saturday.

'No Cash' Wedding Unites Pair

"BARTER BRIDAL" TO BE PAID FOR IN "CREDITS"

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 10—When 18-year-old Jessie F. Barley walks to the tune of the wedding march and promises, "I do" tonight, she will become the first barter bride in Berkeley's first no-cash all-barter wedding.

The bride's trousseau, the flowers, the minister, the musicians, the reception refreshments, the hotel Veterans Memorial Hall where the wedding will be held—all will be paid for—but not a cent of cash will change hands.

Everything will be paid for in credits accumulated by the bride-to-be and her future husband, Roy McDonald, 24, with the Berkeley Self Help Co-operative, Inc.

Mr. Donald is one of the 18 truck drivers working for the co-operative. His blonde sweetheart is employed as a vegetable inspector in the co-operative's commissary department.

Waits 22 Years Betrothed in Italy to Wed Ex-Convict

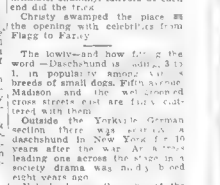
Staunton, Va., Dec. 10—More than 22 years ago Mike Gentile entered the penitentiary to begin a life term. He carried a sweetheart in Italy sent him the word:

"Keep hope. I shall wait for you."

Today Mike Gentile was pardoned. He will end for Naples and wed the girl, Maria, who since May, 1912, has kept hope and waited.

Curiosities

Howard Chandler Christy, knocking off tempera pity from his portraiture, had the time of his life dressing up that talked about bar at the Hotel des Artistes.



He did the murals. Some nudes, they maintain. And there's his little joke about the bar. It looks as though each end runs into infinity. In reality it is only about 15 feet. Intimate, chummy. Mirrors at each end did the trick.

Christy swamped the place at the opening with celebrities from Flagg to Farley.

The lowly—and how fine is the word—Dachshund is coming into his own in popularity among the various breeds of small dogs. Fifth Avenue, Madison and the well-covered cross streets east are fairly cluttered with them.

Outside the Yorkville German section there was recently a dachshund in New York for 10 years after the war. At the swank leading one across the stage in a society drama was nicely bred eight years ago.

Nobody knows the why of the revived popularity, but dog shop owners cannot supply the demand.

Stool Pigeons

There are some 140 stool pigeons known to the high command of the police. They range from the pale-faced squealer among the stewards of a speed garage in a gunny sack. The real criminal life of a stool pigeon is about 10 years. And many believe that far too long.

Wherein I Offer to Make Your Fortune; Lullabye for Jackie | A Kiss and a Collision For Young Ford Frick; Tennis 'Pops' Pull Wool

By AUSTEN LAKE

HERE I AM, FOLKS, WITH MY noble, generous nature, giving away a perfectly priceless idea for a small sum of two cents a copy.

You doubtless recall the gray-haired farmboy named Roger E. Baker who came from Cape Cod with only a washrag and a frivolous manner and set himself up in the leather, restaurant and baseball business hereabouts, and who, just now, is a public guest at the Charles street jailhouse, charged with conversion and busting most of the ten commandments

Austen Lake

Blending delusions of grandeur, a spending mania and a canny business sense, Mr. Baker spent close to $200,000 on a Wayland fizz and food place before his body was snatched by the law.

He reared a gawdy country club pavilion, surrounded by grassy slopes, terraces and winding drives, which he called the Rosebud Gardens and where patrons could pay a dollar a bottle for ginger ale and eat $5 snacks of victuals.

There was much red plush, mahogany and soft, colored lights.

He converted a vast, swampy jungle into an athletic field, complete with grandstands, and a rambling frame dwelling for his ball players.

It was his pet, his pride and his joy before he was hauled away by the authorities and put in a cellar one-room apartment with beans and bacon three times a day.

Now I hear that anybody with $35,000, or even less, can buy the Wayland property. Lying as it does on the Boston Post road, with all its social blandishments in place, it would make an ideal dog-racing site. It's broad, athletic meadow is ready for the sanded dog saucer.

The rambling players' dwelling could be retouched for a parimutuel arcade. There are 40 acres of parking space.

And that, folks, is my priceless idea, fresh from my fertile, restless brain. There I go making somebody else rich and me needing a patch for my breeches

State Board Curfews Child Marvel

THE STATE LABOR BOARD, WITH a healthy interest in juvenile workers, has slapped down on Promoter Charley Gordon's scheme of putting seven-year-old Jack Massey, the child mental protege, in his canvas platform between wrestling bouts tomorrow night at Mechanics Building.

I wrote recently how Charley, the great educator, aimed to prop little Jackie between the plush ropes and have him spout wisdom in his childish treble to the gaping mob of tobacco smokers who are shungering for knowledge. The little tyke, with his mamma at ringside, was to lecture on astronomy, hygiene and the abstractness of which.

But the labor board said, "Nix, Jackie! Have your mamma feed you a nice supper of Pablum and put you into your snuggle-bunny Tuesday evening."

So, Gordon's hairy chimps with their waffle ears will demonstrate astronomy by belting each other's skulls against the ring furniture, while small Jackie's dreams are mixed with visions of Christmas toys and trigonometry theorems.

IN NEW YORK TOMORROW, YOUNG Mr. Ford Frick, the lean, black-haired successor to John A. Heydler, is being installed as president of the National League. Sweet sugar-words will be said and nosegays of hot house blooms will send off their perfumed fragrance.

But a moment after rapping down the gavel, young Mr. Frick will be dipped into a boisterous brawl, with flashes of heat lightning snapping around his ears. The question of dog-racing at Braves Field is his maiden problem, and one with all the possibilities of a jug of nitro-glycerine in the hands of a sleep walker.

WHEN A GRADUATE EDITOR AT Worcester Tech advised his alumni to round up a flock of bull-necked, bolster-bodied football players, regardless of their scholastic talents, he was voicing nothing new.

A private school in Connecticut advertised in a New York paper for football players some years ago. And last year the president of a Southern college advocated hiring a full set of meaty farm boys and cargo handlers who would be paid wages from the A. A. treasury and housed apart from the students.

"Then," he said, "the papers and the alumni would be justified in gnashing their teeth and tearing their scalps when the team lost. We could fire the failures and hire new ones, and the injured and dying could fend for themselves. The students could give their attention to their lessons, and everybody would be happy."

Less for Tennis Amateurs; More for Tennis 'Pops'

THE LAWN TENNIS FATHERS, NOW in session at New York, have just voted to cramp the style of the tennis bums and bumesses by limiting them to eight weeks of traveling and living expenses each year.

This amounts to an involuntary confession by the U. S. L. T. A. that its noted amateurs for generations have been cadging, mooching and sponging for their livings without restraint.

The big tennis amateurs of both genders have found that by joining their tournaments together and jumping from spot to spot, they could live dude lives at no cost and something left over.

This, of course, required collusion between the amateurs and some of the tennis fathers who promoted tournaments and who passed over swollen expense money by the light of the moon.

So now, being a great hand to examine motives, I am not sure whether the tennis fathers are worried over the morals of the amateur tennis gigolos so much as wishful to cut themselves a larger slice of gate profits.

At the Birth of New Professional Football Champions

A SHORT PASS—Ed Danowski, former Fordham grid great, is shown getting a short pass off to Ken Strong which was good for a short gain. One of the Bears is seen rushing in, almost stopped the throw, but Danowski was too fast and got the ball away. It was the first defeat this year for the Bears.

RIDIN' THE BRONC—Bronko Nagurski, one of the outstanding Chicago backs, was effectively stopped by the Giants' linemen. Here Bronko is shown stopped almost in his tracks as he sought to advance the ball. Thirty-five thousand saw the Giants win, 30 to 11. The winners trailed 13 to 3 at the end of first half.

IT'S A FIELD GOAL—Ken Strong makes the first three points for the Giants, new professional football champions, when he kicks the ball over the bars from the 11-yard line. Strong played the leading role in the defeat of the hitherto unbeaten Chicago Bears. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

The Giants came up to the final period trailing, 13 to 3, but, from then until the finish, with Ken Strong leading the assault, they became football maniacs, nothing less.

IT COST Paul Bowser exactly $84.10 to talk with Daniel O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight, in London. Bowser used the trans-Atlantic telephone in an effort to convince O'Mahoney he should accept his offer of a $100,000 guarantee for six bouts in this country.

"O'Mahoney impresses me as a very intelligent athlete," said Bowser. "He didn't accept my offer, but neither did he reject it. He said he wants to wrestle Ed Don George or Jim London in Dublin the latter part of January for the Irish Free State Hospital's Fund.

"O'Mahoney has agreed to come to this country to talk with me and with other promotors. He is a passenger on the Bremen which is due in New York the latter part of the week. I shall meet O'Mahoney in New York and if my money means anything to the Irish sensation I shall sign him to a contract I will outbid any other promotor."

O'MAHONEY is Ireland's greatest athlete. He has surpassed the greatest athletic achievements of Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, Ireland's Olympic star. O'Mahoney defeated the famous doctor throwing the 56-pound weight and then went on to win fame as a wrestler. CAPPOQUIN HAS EDGE ON FIELD IN OPENER

By Dave Wilson

BEST BET — ADOBE POST

Adobe Post [illegible] race appears as the best betting proposition on a difficult card at Epsom Downs, Dexter, this afternoon.

FIRST RACE

Cappoquin, My Sylvia, My Wish

CAPPOQUIN [illegible] to a three-year-old [illegible] over [illegible] sort. That one effort should have put him right on edge. MY SYLVIA turned in a first race effort last out and looms as the main danger.

SECOND RACE

Countess Ann, Mars Palatine, High Mongrel

COUNTESS ANN needs only to run back to her excellent morning trials in order to lead this pack under the [illegible] wire. MARS PALATINE looms as the main danger. The latter showed a turn of high speed last out.

THIRD RACE

Gettin Even, Young Bill, Yancey

GETTIN EVEN has a decided edge [illegible] this route. A smooth ride would likely clinch top honors. YOUNG BILL was never better and may prove dangerous.

FOURTH RACE

Leonard Wilson, High Hand, 2nd, Baby Sweet

LEONARD WILSON, an easy winner last out, looms as a likely repeater. Any sort of a track suits. HIGH HAND, 2ND has gone back a bit in the betting, but I can see him finishing worse than second. BABY SWEEP turns in a corking effort every now and then.

FIFTH RACE

BEST BET—ROYAL LASSIE

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10—Royal Lassie, D. Gray's consistent router, is so well suited by all the conditions of the mile and one-quarter of the seventh number that I must rate her the one best bet on the well-filled card here tomorrow.

FIRST RACE

PLAIN ACE, HOSAIN, AMAZIN

The PLAIN ACE should take the track and never be headed in this [illegible] As nothing [illegible] to carry him [illegible] in the early stages. If any [illegible] upsets the dope it will be HOSAIN. The latter displayed high speed before flattening out in a longer race last out. AMAZIN merits an outside chance off his last race.

SECOND RACE

OVERWOOD, STELLAR, BRIGHT GIRL

OVERWOOD is favored by an inside post post, now this number. That last race should have put him right on edge. STELLAR was the better kind of a tip the other day, but failed to live up to advance notices. Mayhap she's showing improvement. BRIGHT GIRL turned in a fair effort last out, and is not out of this contest by any means.

THIRD RACE

TULEYRIES WAND, HOGARTY, LARISSA

TULEYRIES WAND is meeting nothing as formidable in this number as Fergola, one that drubbed her last time. HOGARTY was a dea sohdrt thoroughbred last out and should show marked improvement. LARISSA will be on the front end as far as she goes.

FOURTH RACE

Sea Finn, Jinnee, Dudley C

SEA FINN, the best on dope in this number, is on the also eligible list and may not get a chance to start. If started, however, he should never leave the issue in doubt. JINNEE, a corking second to King Bonny last out, looms as strictly the one to fear. DUDLEY C graduated from the maiden ranks with ease in his lone start over this strip and I may have him underrated.

FIFTH RACE

TRIOLET, GRAND ACRE, NIGGERTOE

TRIOLET would have beaten Worthington last time, but for being carried out at the head of the homestretch. With good racing luck, I don't believe she can lose this number off. GRAND ACRE, a winner on New England tracks the past summer, is right on edge and looms as the main danger. NIGGERTOE won several heats at the last meeting.

SIXTH RACE

APPEAR, FIGHTING COCK, HAPPY

This is the worst lot of hangtails the writer has even lamped. APPEAR, a slated starter in today's fourth race, looks to have the race at his mercy if sent right back. However, he is on the also eligible list and the chances are against him starting. FIGHTING COCK is from the Mrs. John Hay Whitney stable, but I have no recent line on his present condition or ability. However, we do know that he is eating three squares a day, which gives him some sort of an edge. HAPPY is as cheap as they come, but looks as good as anything else for the short end.

SEVENTH RACE

ROYAL LASSIE, MAKE BELIEVE, AIRWAY

ROYAL LASSIE was pounds the best when she placed to Kingbird the other day. Jockey Monos waited too long before making his move. The distance of this race is a furlong longer and should prove right down her alley. MAKE BELIEVE figures slightly better than AIRWAY in my dope.

Trackman's Parlay

Elsenberg, fourth race, Bay Meadows.

Mint Magi, second race, Charles Town.

FULLER MEETS COOL FRIDAY

New York, Dec 10 (AP)—Barney Ross will defend his junior welterweight title this week, meantime keeping a weather eye on Madison Square Garden, where a possible contender for his lightweight championship title may develop.

Ross will try to protect the junior welterweight crown against the assaults of Bobby Pacho of Los Angeles in a 12 rounder at Cleveland tonight but the outcome of that match may be much less important to him than Friday night's doings at Madison Square Garden.

The Garden card will be featured by the third successive time by Boston's rugged little "heavy" lightweight, Sammy Fuller, who will meet Eddie Coat of Philadelphia at 10 rounds. Two weeks ago Fuller stopped Johnny Jadick of Philadelphia in four rounds.

The Garden hopes to match the winner of Friday's fight with Tony Canzoneri, the survivor to box Ross for the lightweight championship.

Florida Winter Racing Opens Dec. 15 With Tropical Meet

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

New York, Dec 10 Tropical Park in Miami opens December 15, much earlier than usual, for the first of the Florida race meetings.

Tropical Park runs into January, when Joseph E. Widener's famous Hialeah Park takes over for 15 days. Then Tropical Park has a short meeting to wind up the Florida season.

Tropical Park is owned by B. B. Dwyer and his associates. It was built after Hialeah with Dwyer's friend Frank J. Bruen in charge.

Bruen had been Widener's right hand man at Hialeah and when the fate of Florida racing hinged in the well known balance Bruen probably had more to do with saving the game than any other individual in the state.

Bruen quit Widener to join Dwyer in building Tropical because Bruen wanted something of his own.

The Widener influence in Florida kept Tropical from breaking into the 45-day stretch of nice dates enjoyed by Hialeah and, though Tropical and Dwyer are approaching the status of old residenters in Miami, they still get the wrong end of the stick on the racing dates.

Tropical must run early and late, with Hialeah in between where the going is good and fat.

But this year, with Miami packed already with visitors, Dwyer's meeting is likely to prosper greatly.

More than 600 horses are in the barns at Tropical right now with more coming every day, and if you are skeptical about the Miami-bound mob, try to get an immediate reservation on the seaboard or the east coast.

Hialeah is the picture park of the racing game of America. None the less, many horsemen prefer Tropical Park.

Hialeah is located near the little town of Hialeah, some eleven miles from Miami. Tropical is at Coral Gables, not quite so far out.

Both are convenient enough to Miami and Miami Beach, but Tropical Park is less formal and high hat than Hialeah.

It has not been developed scenically or horticulturally to the same extent as Hialeah, and it has none of the flamingos that are Mr. Widener's pride and joy. Yet Tropical is a fine little racing plant.

BRUEN MAY RETURN

Frank J. Bruen, fine sportsman and enormously popular all over the [illegible] quit Tropical Park some time ago. He managed the Hialeah track on Miami Beach each season and is planning new activity this winter, though just what it will be he has not decided.

Bruen, who makes his permanent home in Miami, he [illegible] the late Charles Brown build Marlboro, in Havana, and Arlington Park, in Chicago.

He knows as much about running a racing plant as any man in the world. It is possible he may return to the racing game.

Besides Tropical Park and Hialeah, there are several other plants in Florida. None of the others has ever been successful.

A plant stands idle between Jacksonville and St. Augustine. There is another at Tampa and still another, or what is left of it, at Pompano, between Miami and Palm Beach.

BOWLING TAKES INDOOR SEASON SPORTS LEAD

By Ed Cogswell

A' the meeting of the New England Bowling Association at Huntington Alleys, a discussion arose as to the number of bowlers in action every day in Greater Boston.

Some of the members figured that about 10,000 would be a good guess, while others claimed 15,000 would be nearer right.

They pointed to the fact that some of the alleys have from 20 to 30 leagues rolling each week and in a few of these leagues are from 20 to 56 teams enrolled.

Of course all this was not counting the transient trade, which runs into big figures. Figuring anyway, though, it is safe to say that from week-end to week-end there are more persons engaged in bowling than in any other winter sport.

It appears big to note a crowd of 17,000 at the Garden to watch a hockey game or attending a fight, but the bowlers are busy each and every day.

Another angle is that the bowlers are contestants, not spectators. Every bowler is getting the needed exercise to keep in good health while enjoying a whole lot of fun.

It is certain that bowling has become the leading sport of the winter season, particularly considering the many engaged in rolling the ebonite ball.

Springsteel's Death---

STRONG MEN IN TEARS AS GALLANT EQUINE HAS FATAL FALL

(Ed. Note—There have been moments of drama and tragedy pathos and comedy in the fields of sports during the past year. Each day, staff writers of the Boston American will tell of the most thrill-packed moments in sports they have either "covered" or seen during the active year which is rushing to its completion. The first is herewith presented.)

By Max Kase

There are times when strong men are not ashamed to show their grief. There are times when hard-bitten worthies, who profess a scorn for any show of sentiment or display of tenderness, have their hard crusted exterior melted with a drenching of tears.

Such was the time when Springsteel raced to his death at Rockingham Park. It was a mid New England afternoon in late June, and 18,000 persons thronged the racing grounds to witness one of the tragedies of the turf.

Springsteel was a large five-year-old gray gelding owned by Sylvester W. Labrot, master of the Hollybeach Farm in Annapolis.

The big gray was a real thoroughbred with all the noble qualities of his breed. He had courage and bravery and gallantry. On the track he proved he could win. Like the thoroughbred he was, he proved he could die.

Nobody Sees Jabot Win

Springsteel was entered in the Speed Handicap on that eventful afternoon. It was the feature race on a thrill packed race card with a $5000 prize for the winner of the six furlong dash.

Some of the best handicap horses of the country were competing. There were Jabot and Trumpery of the Whitney Barn, Chinese Empress and Black Hand and Dark Hope and Good Advice.

THE END OF 'SPRINGSTEEL'

HIS GHOST RIDES ON

Whitney pair were listed as even money favorites. Springsteel, because of his victory in the Granite State Handicap, feature of the opening day of the 1934 Rockingham racing, was second choice.

There was the usual short delay at the barrier, and then the field was off to the concentrated "They're Off" yell of clamoring spectators.

Jimmy Burke, a small package of nerve and muscle, had the leg up on the big Labrot gray.

There never was a clear explanation of what happened and how it happened. It all came with stunning suddenness. Chinese Empress had been setting the early pace. The colors of the other horses were almost obscured by the swirling dust churned up by the flying hooves.

Then a horse was seen to flounder, to stagger a step or two and fall. It was Springsteel.

Shoulder Broken; Asks to Be Destroyed

The rest of the field continued to roar on, round the turn into the stretch, down to the wire. Jabot won the rich stake.

But the eyes of the crowd were not on the winner, not on the finish, not on the numbers being posted on the board. They were focused on the drama unreeling itself far off on the back turn.

Jockey Burke had been thrown clear out of his saddle when Springsteel fell. He escaped with a jarring and bruises.

Springsteel slumped to the sod and looked with pain stricken eyes up at the group surrounding him. The expressive liquid eyes seemed to say:

"I can't go any more, I'm hurt and hurt badly."

Irvine, a calloused character of the racing ovals, choked up and sobbed his grief. Burke, a hard-boiled jockey, cried with little control.

Spectators, who jammed the rail, sniffled, coughed and made varied pretense to mask their feelings. Horsemen, who stood by, shed tears at a grief they could feel.

A sage has written:

"Scorn the proud man that is ashamed to weep."

Springsteel kicked and struggled on his plowed earth. Bill Irvine, the Labrot trainer, rushed out on the track, heading a group of horsemen hurrying to the rescue.

Irvine and Burke got the big gray on his feet. Springsteel's shoulder was broken.

Every step must have meant anguish, every move must have sent searing blasts of pain through his big body, but he held his head high and tried to move onto his barn. The injury was too great, however; the effort was too much.

These men were proud in their own way; indifferent to soft things, hard-boiled on life. But a gallant soul was dying, and they cried.

Irvine Gives Order, Then Turns Away

There was little one could do to save Springsteel. With a tremendous effort, Irvine gave the order to destroy the horse. He turned away from the sight, and, when the shot sounded which snuffed out Springsteel's life, almost collapsed.

They carted Springsteel to the infield. There they buried him. The ghost of this gallant steed may be making spectral runs on the wide Rockingham stretches today. Who knows?

Miss Polly Blodgett of the Skating Club of Boston is one of the featured performers in the annual Grey Squirrel Revue at the Boston Arena Saturday night.

Miss Blodgett has been a star of the Club's figure skating ranks for the past few years and will give a four minute exhibition as partner of Roger Turner, U. S. figure skating champion.

Miss Blodgett took a place among the foremost young women skaters for the world's ice figure skating championship late last winter, when she gave a brilliant exhibition in the great charity ice fete at the Arena.

This year in practice sessions with the head of the club she has shown marked improvement. Her appearance in the Revue this coming Saturday evening are expected to be her first steps in a campaign which may take her to U. S. championship heights this season.

FUR JACQUETTE FOR QUEEN

The figure skating by champions, speed and fancy skating, ice novelty and acrobatic stunts by expert skaters and general outings for all are among the many features of the program.

The Queen of the Frolic, to be crowned "Miss Skater," will be awarded a beautiful fur jacquette donated by Scott Furriers. Winter place, Boston. Contestants in the Miss Skater competition must wear some of business clothing. Entries for this event close with Queen of Frolic Chairman on Wednesday at midnight at the B. C.-New Arena. While the Trojans gave all the graceful exhibitions and fancy offensives, the Fighting Irish passed to a pair of touchdowns and a 14-0 victory at the Los Angeles Coliseum in the annual coast classic. Some 50,000 saw the game. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

DEVINE MEETS RAN IN RICKARD RING OPENER

Rickard Program

TEN ROUNDS

Eddie Ran, New York, vs. Harry Devine, Worcester.

SIX ROUNDS

Victor Lotti, Marlboro, vs. Harry Alexanian, Worcester.

Eddie Rossi, Everett, vs. Joey Silva, Cambridge.

FOUR ROUNDS

Ray Mondello vs. Sammy Dalton

Joe Riccilotti vs. Benny Lynch

Boxing fans should witness some real batting tonight when Matchmaker Dick Dunn of the Sharkey A. C. holds his initial show at the Rickard Recreation Center on Friend street.

Eddie Ran, hard hitting Polish lad, who has been campaigning in New York rings, will clash with Harry Devine of Worcester in the feature bout of 10 rounds.

Ran is a touch customer, having given Teddy Yarosz, middleweight champion, and Billy Petrole of Fargo, N. D., hard fights.

Devine, former national amateur champion and member of the 1928 Olympic team, who later won the New England welterweight title, is a clever lad and will give Ran plenty of trouble.

Another bout that promises to be a sizzler will bring together Victor Lotti, ranked Marlboro welterweight and Harry Alexanian in a six round tussle.

SCHOOL HOCKEY LEAGUE OPENS THIS WEEK

By Bill Connell

Hockey stems back to the league position in the Boston area tonight up on parade, all strong at the Arena when the opening game of the Greater Boston League goes on.

Seven dates have been arranged for the teams, four at the Garden and three at the Arena, opening Dec. 12. Games of the week are as follows: Dec. 12, Cambridge vs. Somerville; Dec. 13, Malden vs. North Shore; Dec. 14, Cambridge vs. Malden; Dec. 15, Somerville vs. North Shore; Dec. 16, Cambridge vs. Somerville; Dec. 17, Malden vs. North Shore; Dec. 18, Cambridge vs. Malden.

Most of the fans think the league is a good one and well worth while. Scarcely any of the teams should be weak, with North Shore and Malden the class of the league. Those are the two teams that came through the Metropolitan League with the best records.

Few will believe Marblehead had a setup at Miami. For the Headers not long ago had a were similar victory parade against Lynn, which defeated some of the same teams the season past.

Marblehead had a good team last year, but its greatest asset was five players who played on the same high school basketball team.

Quarterback Dick Wells, Halfbacks Harold Glover and Walter Fader, Fullbacks Dick Messer and Fred Jerman are rated by fistic experts as the best backfield in the league. Wells is a triple threat man, Glover is a fast, shifty runner, Fader is a hard plunging fullback, Messer is a good passer and Jerman is a line plunging fullback.

Malden has a good team, but its greatest asset was a powerful line. Five players who played on the same high school basketball team.

SHARES MIXED AT CLOSE OF TRADING

New York, Dec. 10—The stock market turned in a highly irregular performance today. Utilities, aviation and mining shares were strong and higher, while rail, industrial and oil shares showed recessionary tendencies.

Strength in the utility shares was apparent from the start. Public Service of New Jersey opened a point higher and generally maintained its strength.

MINERS GAIN

Aviation shares continued in demand after the leadership of United Aircraft and United Air Lines.

United States Smelting set the pace for the mining shares with a gain of more than a point, while Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting and Alaska Juneau scored smaller gains.

In contrast to the strength in these divisions the rails presented an almost uniformly weaker appearance. Atchison, New York Central, Lackawanna and other favorites met with a steady dribble of offerings through the session and worked fractionally lower. Union Pacific, however, was firm and moderately higher.

United States Steel firmed following the American Iron & Steel report showing a sharp rise in operations to the best levels since last July. General Motors and Chrysler were easier.

STEEL OUTPUT

The American Iron & Steel Institute repeated current steel output at 32.7 per cent of capacity, against 28.8 last week. The U. S. Steel Corp. also reported shipments of finished products in November totaled 3,05,119 tons, compared with 313,862 in October and 430,338 tons in November last year.

Notwithstanding the mixed tendencies displayed by many equities, most commentators appeared to be satisfied with the undertone of the market and hopes were still held that a vigorous advance will get under way in the next week or so.

The European situation continued as a mild irritant although it was considered doubtful that it was having any appreciable effect upon stocks as a whole. Foreign observers seemed to be confident that the major powers would succeed in working out a peaceful solution of the Yugoslav-Hungarian row, although it was admitted anything might happen in view of the existing political cross-currents.

Many factors, setting the steady importation of gold into the United States, believe that a drastic expansion of credit may be in the making. Gold imports during November totaled $151,108,845 compared with $153,000,500 in October and $2,174,015 in November last year. Exports of the yellow metal amounted to only $69,658 in November as against $2,172,824 in October and $2,957,442 in November, 1933.

Helen Survives the Dinner Ordeal

CHAPTER XXI

What did one wear to a dinner at 7 o'clock? Did one wear a low cut evening dress or an afternoon dress" Helen had bought a dinner dress, but in her present excited state couldn't remember which dress it was.

At last, in desperation, and trying to conceal her utter terror from Walter, she said she'll call Irene.

"Don't be nervous, darling," he counseled, sensing her uneasiness. "One dinner's just like another. The Terhunes are no different than your Tante Frein. Wear that yellow shift and I'll get you some flowers."

"Never mind the flowers, darling," she said hastily. "I'll ask Irene."

"That's a wonderful idea. She'll be so pleased. I bet you two will end up great friends."

Helen gave him a rickly smile as she asked for Mrs. Terhune.

"Irene, this is Helen. Helen Riley, Walter's wife. Irene, would you mind telling me—I mean, Irene, what should I wear to the dinner?"

Did she imagine it or did she hear Irene cackle with merriment?

IRENE GIVES ADVICE

"Have you a lace or net frock without sleeves and not cut too low in the front?"

"I have a brown net dress, but oh, dear, it has sleeves!"

"No, that won't do. Have you a silver or gold or black dress without sleeves? If not, you must get one at once. A dinner dress. No ruffles or tulle. Simple, severe."

"Yes, I have a silver lace dress. It's got an oval neck but it's got rather a low back."

"No one will look at your back. Wear that. And a single strand of pearls or jade around your neck but no colored beads."

"Oh, no, I don't even own any."

"Very well. Anything else?"

"No, thank you, Irene. Thank you very much," she stammered.

Helen hung up the receiver. Her hands were wet.

"My lord, Helen, you look beautiful!" Walter exclaimed as she came into the living room where he sat with the evening papers. He rose as she came in. "That's a lovely shift. You are simply beautiful."

Ordinarily Helen would have taken heart. She knew she looked nice. The dress had the same tone values as her hair, and her rounded slimness set off the gown to prefection. Her wrap had a full silver fox collar that gave her added height and her platinum-colored hair melted into its soft fluff. But Helen, even had doubts whether her evening wrap was quite suitable, as several women and all the men turned around to stare at her as they crossed the lobby.

NUMB WITH FRIGHT

She was actually numb with stage fright as they entered the Terhune apartment. The Terhune's old butler took her wrap and ushered her into a guest bedroom with a connecting bath. Helen had never in her life met a butler face to face and she had no idea why she was shown into a bedroom, but concluded it might be for a final examination of her toilet.

But when she shook hands with old Mrs. Terhune, her stage fright magically vanished. Mrs. Terhune reminded Helen so vividly of her Grandmother Schiller that she uttered a little exclamation of joy and to Irene's amazement the old lady let did Helen make the move?

"I'm so pleased to meet you," Helen clasped the old hand warmly.

"Why, you dear child," the old lady laughed. "You're only a little girl. And already a bride! Dear me, how old are you?"

"Twenty-two," Helen smiled, still holding the wrinkled old hand in hers.

"No, not really. Why, when I was twenty-two I had Cee in the cradle. I must say girls look much younger today."

Cecily behind her mother kissed Helen, too. "Walter, you have my sincere congratulations. She's a darling," Cecily said in her deep voice.

Walter fairly beamed with joy.

"YOU LOOK NICE"

Having kissed mother and daughter, when she shook hands with Mr. Terhune, Helen quite naturally and innocently leaned over and to Irene's horror kissed him, too. The old man was terribly pleased, and before the dinner was half over he discovered that Helen was interested in the history of acquired title to land—although she had never heard of it before—and he was overjoyed at discovering a new and interested listener.

"You look quite nice," Irene observed, patting Helen's cheek as they sat down at the table.

Walter, seeing the gesture and unable to hear the words, was filled with gratitude toward Irene and of pride in Helen. Even Irene liked her.

Helen found herself between Dirk and Byron Mayhew, a nephew had the noveliest and friendliest eyes Helen had ever seen. She relaxed her tension as Mrs. Mayhew, catching her eye, winked merrily at her.

Dirk said "You look good enough to eat, Helen."

"Thank you very much," Helen blushed, but for the life of her couldn't think of another thing to say.

She hoped rather desperately that Mr. Mayhew, who was engaged in animated conversation with Irene on his right, wouldn't decide to include her.

How clever Irene was. How biting her wit! She talked politics and finance with the men; in fact, did much of the talking and, Helen observed, looked a little bored at such odd moments when she wasn't talking.

DIRK GIVES PRAISE

The dinner, however, was delicious.

Helen felt she ought to say something. She turned to Dirk. "The coup is awfully good"—then felt herself blushing furiously at her stupidity.

"It sure is." Dirk agreed heartily. "Mother has a swell cook and she understands cooking herself. You know it always amazes me how little American know about cooking. American women, it seems to me, actually think there is something degrading about cooking."

"I think they class it with housework," Helen suggested.

"You're absolutely right! Only in America can food be thrown together as tasteleasly as it is. Why what a Frenchwoman can do with a bone, a few bits of vegetables and scraps of meat is a miracle. And here with the superabundance we have of fresh foods, the results are appalling. Have you ever been abroad, Helen?"

"No, I've never been anywhere."

"Curious. You have a certain quality about you that's European, and mind you, this is a compliment! European women have a quality—a warmth, a femininity that American women with their ambitions of equality and comradeship are fast losing."

Vera Mayhew, overhearing him, exclaimed. "Oh, Dirk, you've not sunk to decrying this freedom!"

"Lord forbid! I was merely saying that—what are you women going to do with all the freedom you're getting, once you get it?"

GLAD TO BE FEMININE

"I doubt it. I don't think cutting your hair and exposing your shins are ardently acquiring all men's vices will be such fun once women, and men too, for that matter, are used to it."

"What effect do you think it will have then, Dirk?" Vera asked.

Dirk laughed. "I'm no authority on the subject, but I wager in ten years you'll all be damned glad to be feminine again. Even the suffragettes have gone soft on us now that they've got the vote."

"Nonsense, we achieved Prohibition."

Dirk fingered his full wineglass. "So it would seem," he grinned.

In the general discussion in which Helen had taken no part, although she would have liked to, Dirk turned to her to ask: "How are you amusing yourself these warm days, Helen?"

"I'm having a lovely time. I'm discovering New York!"

"New York would be even grander if it weren't for the people, the noise and the big buildings."

"Why, I love the crowds."

"Well, I do too, from a distance of about a thousand feet in altitude and twenty miles in space," he grinned.

"I feel that way too sometimes," Helen admitted.

SATURDAY'S ANSWERS

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

LET DOWN YOUR NETS

Discouraged?
Feel that life has been a shallow, futile performance?
Ready to quit in disgust?
Other men have felt that.
Once there were three fishermen—Simon and James and John. All night they had fished, up and down the shore, but had caught nothing. With the morning their spirits were as empty as their nets. So they took their nets and spread them to dry and sat down, idle-handed.

Elsie Robinson

And a young man came by—a young man who was wise about tides and men and the deep, secret places of the sea.

STORY OF MIRACLE

He sat and talked in a friendly way with them, quietly observing their idle hands, their empty spirits, their drying nets. And he listened to the story of their fruitless night.

Then, very simply, but in such a way that his force ran through them in a quickening, Jesus said:

"LAUNCH OUT INTO THE DEEP AND LET DOWN YOUR NETS FOR A DRAUGHT."

They must have stared at each other when he said that, thinking how foolish and unreasonable people could be who knew nothing about fishing.

But there was something in His manner which stilled their arguments. He presently began said, sighing at the hopelessness of the thing:

"Master, we have toiled all night and taken nothing; nevertheless at Thy word I will let them down the nets."

So when they left the shallows in which they had been wont to fish and they launched into the deep which they had avoided

"And when they had done, they enclosed a great multitude of fish in their net broke."

PICK UP COURAGE

Discouraged?
Ready to quit in disgust?
Sitting beached—empty-spirited, idle-handed?
LAUNCH OUT INTO THE DEEP!
Leave the beach of your discouragements and discontent—
Gather up the idle nets of your energy and imagination, courage and initiative—
Gather up your nets and leave the shallows where you have been wont to fish—
THRUST OUT FROM THE LAND INTO HE DEEP PLACES OF THE SEA—
Into the vast, rough adventures of love and pain, terror and bliss, danger and death—
Face the great combers and the dark troughs of experience—
Dare the wind and the thunder and the lightning and the ruthless currents of fate—
CAST YOUR NETS INTO THE DEEP—
THERE IS ABUNDANCE IF YOU HAVE THE COURAGE TO TAKE IT!

But it forgot to send us an invite to the international army of the air. Either that or there will be there when the plebiscite votes on the Saar grapes.

Another League army could be used on the balky old Balkans which are holding a concensus of varied opinions. We should be thankful that our own hillbillies take their revenge with music.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

MONDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Let National Crime Conference Draft Definite and Drastic Program

THE crime situation in the United States beggars description.

The number of murders, kidnapings, robberies, attacks and burglaries has reached such stupendous totals that mere figures no longer carry their ordinary meaning.

But there they are—these figures, which stare us in the face with stark and horrifying truth, certified by the United States Department of Justice.

Compiled from an area which contains less than half the population of the country, the survey shows that in last year alone more than 800,000 crimes were committed.

Murders are reckoned in America by the thousands; robberies and burglaries by the tens of thousands.

THE crime at the moment regarded as the most atrocious is, perhaps, that of kidnaping.

The prominence of its victims and the natural recoil from its cruelty have stirred the nation as other equally abhorrent crimes apparently have not.

And yet, the cases actually solved number slightly over thirty, while the unsolved cases approximate three thousand.

The "crime situation" signifies much more than the criminal and his victim.

It includes the general laxity in law enforcement which prevails throughout the country; ineffective police organization; incapable and slack prosecution of arrested offenders; feeble laws perforated by loopholes of escape, and judges so deficient in character and learning that they have no business presiding over courts of justice.

Looming even larger than these factors in the spread of crime is the fell fact that corruption—political corruption—permeates and pervades our life, undermining the courts, staying the hand of the police and weaving about the criminal and his crimes a protection which is as infamous as it is effective.

THESE are the conditions which we believe it our duty pitilessly to expose.

It is, therefore, the intention of the Hearst newspapers, with all the power they can summon, to bring the country to a realization of this intolerable situation.

The correctives are plain. They are needed as nothing else is needed in the United States today.

WE MUST HAVE A VASTLY EXTENDED FEDERAL SECRET SERVICE FOR THE SKILLFUL AND CERTAIN DETECTION OF CRIME.

The cunning of the criminal must be overmatched by the intelligence and resolution of his pursuit.

THE SEPARATE STATES OF THE UNION MUST ESTABLISH AND MAINTAIN AN EFFICIENT STATE CONSTABULARY.

This must be independent of and inaccessible to local political influence and restraint.

THE STATE CONSTABULARY AND THE FEDERAL FORCES MUST BE CO-ORDINATED.

BY MUTUAL support of each other's endeavors they can bring the war against organized crime and organized criminals to a successful issue.

An imperative obligation rests upon our governments, both state and national, to protect the citizen.

Our present methods of coping with crime are demonstrated to be outworn and ineffective.

THE LAWS FOR THE DEPORTATION OF ALIENS WITH CRIMINAL RECORDS must be strengthened and enforced.

Those who through our careless naturalization methods have gained citizenship should FORFEIT THEIR CITIZENSHIP and be subject to deportation upon the commission of a major crime.

We must have VIGOR—MORE VIGOR—and EVER VIGOR in this crusade!

Much as economic recovery is to be desired, it is not more important than the rescue of our country from the domination of crime—organized and methodized crime, pursued as a vocation, and HELPED more than hindered by the law.

TODAY there opens in Washington a national conference on crime.

It will be addressed by a distinguished group of speakers, including President Roosevelt, Attorney-General Homer Cummings and former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson.

High state officials, judges of the courts, representatives of the Department of Justice, former prosecuting attorneys, the president of the American Bar Association, directors of penal institutions, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and various experts in special fields are to take part in the deliberations of the conference.

A meeting of such weight and promise is a proper recognition of the gravity of the problem which confronts the nation.

The proceedings will be followed with the closest attention throughout the country.

Next month the 74th Congress will begin its first session.

The National Crime Conference should result in a definite and drastic program for the session, and Congress should enact the program without hitch and without fail.

Let them both—the conference and the Congress—make themselves memorable forever in the moral history of the nation!

Making Roads Safer

Connecticut Idea is Good

Frank E. Lyman, Massachusetts commissioner of public works, recommends that the incoming Legislature enact a law to put speed-governors on all cars registered in the Bay State.

The "governor" would limit the speed to fifty miles an hour.

With around a million cars registered here, the plan would be a bonanza for the makers of speed-governors.

Clocking tests place the average speed of cars at between forty and forty-five miles an hour.

Any auto driver is well aware that he would have difficulty in maintaining any such speed, except on the open roads.

But, accepting the clocking tests as conclusive, for the sake of illustration, what good would limiting speed to fifty miles an hour do?

Mr. Lyman's plan to have the department of which he is now head determine average safe speeds on all State highways is much better.

It is the Connecticut idea, and has been highly successful there and in New Hampshire since signs were posted showing drivers about the speed they ought to set as their limit.

Child's Happy Thought

It Lives Long, Helps Many

Nine-year-old Miss Fanny Merrill, walking to her father's church in Bulfinch place, in the year 1849, had an inspiration.

She decided it would be a good thing to do something in behalf of the poor little Bostonians of that neighborhood.

At her suggestion the Children's Mission to Destitute Children was formed.

Eighty-five years have passed, but the Children's Mission keeps up its helpfulness.

Its latest philanthropy is arranging with the Massachusetts General Hospital to care for a group of about a hundred young people suffering from after-effects of rheumatic fever or rheumatic heart disease.

The care will continue for about five years, the time needed to effect complete recovery, and make them strong for later life.

The world is always in need of little girls like Miss Merrill. We can only hope the supply will never be exhausted.

Stock Stands Still

Reminds You of One You Bought

Philosophers of old used to struggle with the problem of perpetual motion.

Not so today. At least in State Street. The problem there is what to do with something that JUST STANDS STILL!

It seems that the stock of one public utilities company has not been traded in for 10 months.

Just nothing doing. So the Securities Exchange Commission in Washington has been petitioned to sanction its removal from listing on the stock exchange.

It is not a moment too soon. The boardroom customers might find the suspense of waiting for a trade too much of a strain.

Safeguard Money

Advertise for Bids

The special commission established to investigate matters connected with public works has filed for the incoming Legislature a wise report.

It recommends that

"Every contract for the construction, reconstruction or repair of any public work, estimated to involve a cost of $1000 or more, be advertised and let to the lowest responsible bidder."

And the words "responsible bidder" ought not to be twisted into meaning "political favorites."

The field should be open and fair, with the taxpayer's good the first consideration.

Don't Raise Taxes

They're High Enough Now

The Division of Metropolitan Planning in a special report filed for consideration of the State Senate recommends extension of the rapid transit system of the Boston Elevated to Arlington.

Recently the Division filed a report urging establishment of a fund to be used for future extensions of the Elevated.

Until the Elevated is operated at a profit, it is NOT plain where the money for the fund is to be found.

If the proposal means that taxpayers are to be burdened further, it should be ignored, at least for a time.

Taxes are already too high. And must be reduced.

Human Side of the News

Germany Honors World War Spy

By the grace of Herr Hitler and his minions the memory of Karl Hans Lody is to be preserved for posterity as the Nathan Hale of Germany.

The twentieth anniversary of Lody's death in the Tower of London has been marked within the past month by the unveiling of a statue at the gate of the ancient castle of Lubeck. He is represented as a knight in full armor, and above the memorial hangs a bell which is to be tolled on the sixth of November of every year.

Lody, a dark, short, energetic young man, well-known in New York and Omaha, was the first of the prominent spies of war to go to their doom, the forerunner of Mati Hari and Bolo Pasha.

In 1912 he had married the daughter of a wealthy Omaha brewery man, but the union ended soon after in divorce, and the outbreak of the war found Lody in Berlin, subject to military call as a lieutenant in the naval reserve.

TYPE FOR ESPIONAGE

He was an ideal type for espionage, with easy manners, a way of working himself into good society and a knowledge of English. There was little of the German about him.

In fact, he had become so Americanized that he was able to convince the American Embassy in Berlin that he was "Charles Inglis" of New York, and as such received an American passport. That done, it was an easy matter to get into England and start the flow of vital information back to Berlin.

"Charles Inglis" proved to be a prolific letter-writer, as well as something of a commuter between London and Scotland. He had another interesting habit, which was that of odd arrangement of the postage stamps on his letters. Most likely this betrayed him, because England, under Kitchener, had become alive to the spy menace, which for months had been playing havoc with her war plans and costing her thousands of lives in France and on the high seas.

The circumstances of his arrest were never made public save that he was taken from a hotel in Killarney to stand trial in the Tower of London, the first spy in more than a hundred years to face a court-martial in England.

The trial was sensational. The court assembled in the Middlesex Guildhall under the presidency of Lord Chelesmores, who wore a dark blue uniform with golden epaulettes.

The other eight officers were in khaki uniforms, and under the law of the Romans, which prevails in British courts-martial, these nine judges were the court

Stalin's Order to U. S. Communists

"The American Communist Party must be improved and Bolshevised. For that end we must work in order to forge real revolutionary cadres and a real revolutionary leadership of the proletariat, capable of leading the many millions of the American working class toward the revolutionary class struggles."

Stalin, in address May 6, 1929.

AS CRITO BIDS

"As Crito bids!" so runs the tale.
To Socrates in chains, in jail,
Condemned to die, when from its trip
Should come to port the holy ship,
Came Crito, as a friend, one day
Suggesting that he run away.

With words persuasive Crito proved Guards could be bribed and chains removed;
Friends would assist him in his flight.
A ship would ride the tide that night,
And Socrates could live, if he Would only flee to Thessaly.

Rather than live and have it said
That Socrates from death had fled
And chosen pleasure over pain,
He answered: "Here I will remain.
Good friend, 'twould wrong yourself and me
If from this judgment I should flee."

Still does it call for courage strong
To do the right when friends are wrong;
Still it is difficult to stay
When friends point out an easier way;
To stand alone for what is true
And not "as Crito bids" to do.

of last resort, with no appeal from their findings.

The charges against Lody were that he had been sending to Germany minutely detailed reports of the fortifications of the Firth of Forth and the armament and location of the British warships. He was said also to have communicated the measures taken for the protection of public buildings against the attacks of the Zeppelins.

Lody bore himself with the stiffness of the German military caste and would admit nothing beyond the statement that he had been sent to England to report the actual losses of the British Navy in any major sea engagement.

He was convicted, and although some of the Cabinet members favored life imprisonment, Lord Kitchener insisted on the death penalty as a measure for the vigorous combatting of the spy menace.

Lody was taken to the Tower and seated in a chair in the rifle range. He refused to be blindfolded, folded his arms and crossed his legs while the eight men in the firing squad took aim. Thus died Karl Lody, the first person to be executed at the Tower since Lord Lovat was beheaded after the Battle of Culloden and the end of the Jacobite Rebellion.

A week later a letter was received in Omaha dated "The Tower, London" and it wound up with this paragraph:

"When my friends hear of me again, doubtless my body shall have been placed in concrete beneath this old tower, or my bones shall have made a pyre. But I shall have served my country. Doubtless my demise shall be heralded as that of a spy, but I have spiritual consolation. Others have suffered, and I must accept the reward of fate."

WRITES ABOUT

Stupidity of Humans

The human race has but one single enemy and that is its own stupidity. Man is but a weak and puny savage on the face of our plans and he has always occupied a most precarious and perilous position. Surrounded by sabre-toothed tigers and sabre-toothed microbes, glaciers, volcanoes and tidal waves, he has been obliged to survive a million dangers.

Hendrik van Loon

But today the only enemy that impedes man's progress is his mulish unwillingness to use the brain which the Lord in his almighty mercy has given him for the purpose that he might rid himself of all his enemies and might really become the master of his own destiny.

FEELS HUMBLE

All that has been said before has not done the slightest good, and here I am saying it again, knowing full well that it will not do the slightest good. But lying flat on my back as a result of my own hopeless obstinacy in refusing to believe that I was not a little Jehovah, I feel contrite and humble of spirit, and at the same time a little helpless.

For I realize that just as soon as I shall be half-way on my feet again, Broun will call me up to take part in a strike, and some philanthropic committee in Flatbush will appeal to me for the $500 worth of a free lecture for the billionth needy case, and I shall forget all about my excellent doctor's advice.

And then I shall be on my back again, pondering the queer fact that a bank clerk should have blood best fitted to be transfused with my own, while all the learned men of my profession seem to belong to the class of chimpanzee and Australian aborigine. And that, after all the ungrateful things I have said and written about bankers.

But to return to mankind's incredible stupidity: I sometimes wonder whether it isn't part of the game, and whether stupidity is not as unavoidable as sunshine or rain.

TWO SETS OF BRAINS

Sometimes, for a few short decades, it looked as though intelligence had actually conquered stupidity, but in the end, with a fine flourish of trumpets, the assembled hordes of ignorance had always crashed triumphantly through the phalanx of the bright and eager boys who had hoped to make this vale of tears something better than a mere dog kennel—and everything had been as it always has been before.

To be perfectly candid, it almost appears to me that mankind has two sets of brains. One of those he applies to the social and economic and religious problems of the day, to those problems which might be called the folk ways. The second part of his brain takes care of all the rest; of his daily existence, of his science, and of the technical end of his industrial development.

By some curious alchemy of the mind which I have never been quite able to understand he has been able to perform veritable miracles within the department which has to do with his practical life.

But within the realm of his absurd old folkways he remains a slimy cave-dweller. His grasp of the world, as soon as he functions as a mere citizen of the state or his native village, is that of the grandfather of the first man who learned to chip a piece of stone 300,000 years ago.

He then functions in a social environment that would have delighted the fish-eating savages of a prehistoric settlement of pile-dwellers.

And the moment you hint that he might at least add 1 per cent of his intelligence of Brand Number Two to the affairs of the Department of Number One, he threatens you with bodily insults and calls for that highly efficient department of immigration which guards us against undesirable aliens and then once in a while, just for good measure, lets dear Brother Hauptmann enter the country to make our tables and chairs for us and to bring sweetness to his little son at Yuletime.

As soon as I am on my feet again I shall have to look into this matter.

Meanwhile, as a little bit of consolation to those who sadly deplore that we are now in the fifth year of the depression and that nothing seems to have changed very seriously for the better, I would like to ask the question:

"Would you think you could get very far if you tried to run the Twentieth Century Limited by means of a team of oxen?"
